CURE FOR BLOATING IN CATTLE.

When an animal has eat too much green herbage, it ferments in the stomach and produces carbonic acid gas, which occasions bloating. To destroy this gas, make the animal swallow a spoonful of ammoniac mixed with a glass of water.—Perhaps a dose of lye would do as well.

Tea.—Mr. William Prince, of Long Island, has about a hundred fine flowering plants, both of the Green and the Black or Bohea Tea. He has also the Japan Tea of North Carolina, the New Zealand Tea, and some plants, the flowers of which are used with others in perfuming the finer descriptions of Tea.

Hints.—Superintend in person as much of your own business as practicable, and observe with a watchful eye the management of what is necessarily committed to the agency of others.

Let no common amusements interfere or mingle with your business; make them distinct employments.

FARMER'S CALENDAR.

"See now there is snow and the sledding is good;
Make ready your team boys, and get home your wood;
Look well to your barns, and thrash out your grain;
Be content with your lot and never complain."

The orbs of heaven pursue their courses, the seasons walk their round, and creation fulfils the design of its being, man only excepted. Man, wayward man, if not continually goaded or checked, either sinks down into a state of listless inactivity, or is everlastingly wandering out of the way. Hence the necessity of continually setting before him his duty, and of endeavouring by persuasion, by flatery, and by every other means, to induce him to act, in some measure as he should do. But what can I say, that I have not already said upon this subject? The field of argument seems to have been stripped bare; and the arguments to have been presented in every possible point of view. And what have they availed? We see mankind still persisting in the errors we have endeavoured to combat.—We see farmers still pursuing what they are pleased to call the good old way, fully resolved to have nothing to do with the improvements of these degenerate times. We see idlers about our streets—dissipation still staggering down the road of wretchedness—and innocence reduced, by the vices of others, to the most abject state of misery and want. These things are against us; but we will not despair.

And tread the steps their fathers trod,

We'll exhort, and we'll threaten, we'll flatter and amuse
All those who have patience our page to peruse;
We'll teach them their duty—we'll teach them the way,
And clear our own skirts, if they do not obey.

As I have room, I would just hint, in this place, that the evenings are now long—that you have a number of good books, (or had ought to have) and have a Newspaper weekly without borrowing of your neighbours—and that you and your family have minds which need improvement. "A word to the wise is sufficient."

FARMER'S CALENDAR.

'Away now to market as soon as you please,
With your pork and your poultry, your butter and cheese;
Your beans and your flax, your grain and your flour,
And do not delay it till sleighing is o'er.'

Do not let the chime of the merry bells wheedle you away a sleigh-riding, to the neglect of this golden opportunity of sledding wood. After having laid in a year's stock of wood you may then improve the sleighing in visiting your friends. But business before friends should be the farmer's motto. If any one is so regardless of his own happiness and comfort as to neglect laying in a store of wood while the sledding lasts, he need not expect that I shall take his part or try to alleviate his misery, if his wife combs his head for him every week during the summer on the account. Nor shall I pity him much if now and then he has a late dinner and a raw pudding into the bargain. We frequently hear complaints about fretful and scolding wives and to be sure they are not very pleasant or agreeable companions. We blame them for their peevishness, but, my word for it, the fault is our own five times out of ten. What can be more vexatious to a woman, than to be tied at home and to be obliged to have the care of a large family of children while her husband is spending his time at a neighbor's—lounging at a tavern or grogshop and doing scarcely any thing for the comfort of his family at home? I have often been surprised that the patience of women should hold out as it does. Place a man in the circumstances in which many of them are placed, and, I'll be bound, he would be confined as a bedlamite within a month.

Be in season about getting out your flax, and then when you enter your house instead of meeting a reproachful blast, your ears will be saluted by the acceptable music of the spinning wheel. If husbands would do their duty, I can predict with the certainty of an eclipse that the number of Xantippies would be diminished just 75 per cent.

FARMER'S CALENDAR.

"Come, boys, to the woodpile your axes apply,
Prepare for the spring work, 'twill come by and by;
See the sun rises higher, and the snow melts away—
Now give to your cattle the best of your hay."

As this is the season in which every farmer, who has it in his power, should manufacture a supply of maple sugar, the following directions, may serve to prevent much of that article being spoiled in the making.—Your buckets for catching the sap should be well cleansed and scalded before the trees are tapped. Your sap should be kept clean through the process of boiling. Avoid letting your sap or syrup stand long in an iron kettle, as the rust will give it a dark colour. When boiled nearly down to syrup a little lime should be thrown into the kettle. At this stage of boiling as well as in sugaring off, care should be taken to avoid heating the top of the kettle too hot, or any other way burning, as it will injure both the colour and flavor of the sugar. When the syrup is boiled down turn it while hot into a clean wooden vessel and let it stand two or three days to settle; then turn it off carefully from the dirt, and strain it. Hang it over a gentle fire and when it is warm, stir in one pint of milk to four or five gallons of syrup, which will rise as it begins to boil and must be taken off with a skimmer. If you wish to have your sugar very nice, boil it till one half or two thirds of it will grain, turn it hot into a tight cask, let it stand in a cool place undisturbed, till the bottom is grained, then turn off the molasses and turn the cask bottom up over some vessel to catch what will run out, and let it stand as long as any will drip; then set it upright and what moisture remains will settle to the bottom leaving the top dry and of a fine quality. Let these plain directions be carefully followed and I will insure you as beautiful and as palitable sugar as the best Muscovado; and I can assure you that its sweetness will not be at all diminished by the reflection, that it contains the tears of no poor slave mingled in its composition.

FARMER'S CALENDAR.

"Look well to your sheep your oxen and cows,
And put now in order your harness and ploughs;
Mend up broken fences, take diligent care,
And plough, sow and harrow, while the weather is fair.

'Don't be discouraged, if you should occasionally slip down by the way, and your neighbors should tread over you a little. In other words don't let a failure or two dishearten you. Accidents happen—miscalculations will sometimes be made—things will often turn out differently from our expections and we may be sufferers. It is worth while to remember that fortune is like the skies of April, sometimes clouded and sometimes clear and favorable; and as it would be folly to despair of again seeing the sun, because to day it is stormy, it is as unwise to sink into despondency when fortune frowns, since, in the common course of things, she may be surely expected to smile again.' I have known a man commit suicide, while possessed of his thousands, only because he expected a failure in his crops and feared that he might possibly come to want. I have known others, who had been so lucky (as most of us are) as to get a little into debt, become so much discouraged by the unceremonious call of a sheriff, that all their energy was parallised.—The loss of their farms was the consequence. Take courage then—go steadily forward—be industrious—be frugal—be temperate—be honest—satisfy your creditors as fast as you can—deal frankly and kindly with all—exercise a neighborly and obliging spirit, and, if you do not prosper as rapidly, depend upon it, you will be as happy as any of your neighbors.

Ye Sluggard! who have lain dormant, like bears in the caverns of the mountains, and have only sucked subsistence from your paws, awaken from your slumbers and not be the only beings in the world that are, at this season, without vigour and activity.

Grain, early peas, radishes, onions, &c. should be sowed this month if the ground be sufficiently dry.

APRIL has 30 days—1823.

Leaves the fertile meadows bare;
And the storm, on whirlwinds riding,
No more chills the vernal air.

FARMER'S CALENDAR.

"When your lands are prepared, you may, if you please,
Finish sowing your barley, your flax, oats and peas:
By the tenth plant potatoes—by the fifteenth your corn,
And see that your sheep in good season are shorn."

At this season, the following axioms may suggest some profitable hints to those whose business it is to cultivate the soil.

1. Despise not your own profession, but regard it, as all should do, the first in respectability and importance.

2. Do not attempt to cultivate more land than you can stock and manure to advantage. Remember it is better to till 30 acres well than 100 in a slovenly manner. What you cannot improve do not undertake to cultivate. Cultivate what you attempt to cultivate well—the remainder of your lands will yield most profit in firewood and timber. Large pastures may be profitable with no other labour than what is necessary to keep them clear of bushes; but to run over 20 acres of plough land, or mowing land for what, with good cultivation, may be obtained from five is the very quintessence of folly and bad husbandry.

3. Endeavour to raise good grain for it will always sell for a good price, even in years of plenty; whereas it is only in seasons of scarcity that there is a demand for grain of an inferior quality.

4. Let your stock of cattle, horses, sheep, &c. be of the best sorts, and more remarkable for utility than for beauty, or fashion.

5. Depend upon your own farms for the subsistence and comforts of life, and admit no guest into your house, who cannot live on the productions of our own country.

These axioms, reduced to general practice, would soon change the aspect of our country. A portion of our now half cultivated farms would soon acquire the neatness and fertility of a garden, while the remainder run up to beautiful groves, affording an abundance of firewood and timber, with increased profit to the possessor.

But the spring with all its beauty
Opens to our ravish'd view:
And, by pleasure led or duty,
All their various ways pursue.

FARMER'S CALENDAR.

"Complete now your spring work with diligent care
The boys now to training, the men to the fair:
A time to make stone wall, and bad fences mend,
Look well to your cornfields—your gardens attend.

There are some people, who would seem, from their conduct, to be specially appointed to oversee the affairs of their neighbors, and who appear to be much better acquainted and to take a deeper interest, in their neighbors interest than their own. There is my neighbor Yorick; he absolutely knows every thing that is transacted in the neighborhood, even to the minutest trifle. I met him the other day and he gave me a precise moment of the going to bed and the getting up of every family in the lane, and told, to an iota, what each of them ate for dinner, and even to the spice and gravy. I have often wondered what such gossips could have in view. They certainly act contrary to their own interest, and are sure soon to be stigmatised as idlers and busy-bodies in other men's matters. And besides, if any notice is taken of them, they are sure to keep the neighborhood in a perpetual broil, as if they had somewhat of the tadpole nature and could not live out of muddy water.

Look well to your gardens and see that your tender plants are not evertopped and robbed by the noxious weeds. A garden once seasonably and thoroughly wed will require but very little labor to keep it clear of weeds afterwards. Farmers are too apt to consider their gardens of trifling consequence; but if properly managed, there is no other part of their lands, which would yield them equal profits in proportion to the labor bestowed.

If you are anticipating the pleasure of feasting on a good Indian pudding by and by, you had better keep an eye at your cornfields. I have often heard my uncle Samuel say, that by a little trouble our profits double. He says, corn should be hoed three times at least, and if the ground be weedy, four or five times, and my uncle Samuel is a farmer.

FARMER'S CALENDAR.

"Come hasten brave lads and finish the hoeing,
Then grind up your scythes and away to your mowing,
The weather is fine—there's no time for delaying,
Lay hold, while the sun shines, and finish the haying."

There are persons who attend to no business of their own, and seem determined, if possible, to prevent their neighbors from attending to theirs. 'What can be more vexatious, when you are just going about your ordinary business, and especially at this hurrying season, than for some idle, gabbling fellow to come up and take you by the button to say "only a word" and detain you a full hour, listening to his story which has neither beginning, middle or end? I presume that my neighbor Longwind has, within six months, cost me more than two of my best cows are worth by this very species of ill manners. He thinks he is one of the cleverest and most agreeable chaps in the whole neighborhood, and he laughs through all his stories, believing them, no doubt, well told and wondrous witty. He accosted me the other day as I was going to dinner—and this is important business with me, for I am an old man and my working days are nearly over. "Good morning, uncle Oliver, I've a word to say to you." "Well be short, I'm called to dinner." "O yes, I'll be short," but before the fellow had explained to me how his pig had gotten into his cellar and overturned his milk pans, the pudding was as cold as a stone, and worthy dame Dorothy almost uttered a complaint. Short speeches, short stories, short courtships —a wise man will always be short in these things. I never knew a short sermon that was not the more liked for it—a short story that had not the more pith in it—or a short courtship that was not more fortunate than a long one. I showed a lad who had been running after his sweet hearts two years. old cousin Jeremiah's long purse, which measured half a yard, and had but a single sixpence at the bottom—he borrowed it to take down to Charlott's and they both took a hint and got married at once.

FARMER'S CALENDAR.

'The harvest calls loud for your labour and care;
Apply then the sickle, while the weather is fair,
For storms are approaching of thunder and rain,
But though the storm rages, 'tis folly to complain.'

Business before friends. That is to say, do not neglect important business for the sake of visiting. Get your work of the season done, your crops secured, and then there can be no objection to your riding about a few days and calling upon your friends. But be careful to hinder them as little as possible from their business. Time is too precious a boon to be wasted about trifles; and therefore every one, who is disposed, should be permitted to improve it to the best purposes.

Secure your grain before it is beaten down by rains and destroyed by vermine, and then plough in the stubble on such lands as are intended for tillage another year. Gather in your early peas and sow turnips where they grew, and be preparing your fallow and other lands for sowing winter grain. This will be found a favorable season for cutting bushes and mowing Canada thistles, if you do not wish them to grow again. Much has been said and written about what was the most effectual method of destroying the Canada thistle, which is overrunning so great a portion of our country. Though there are undoubtedly different methods by which this plant may be destroyed, I know of only one which is at all practicable on a large scale, and this is by mowing them down. Experience has proved that, if they be cut in wet weather and when in blossom, very few of the roots will sprout again. At this time the stalk is hollow, and the water, entering it, finds its way to the extremeties of the roots, causing a rapid decay.

Remember that delays are dangerous. Keep pace with your business, and then will you be able to keep out of the way of the sheriff.

"Familiarize yourself with your books, keep them accurately, and frequently investigate and adjust their contents. This is an important item."

FARMER'S CALENDAR.

"As soon as the storm and the bad weather is over,
Secure all your grain and your flax under cover;
Give salt to your cattle and take up your bees;
Dig early potatoes and plough if you please."

The farmer if he minds his own business only has the best title to happiness of any man, and is the surest of enjoying it. His mind and his bodily powers are constantly engaged, on which account he not only escapes the insipidity of indifference and the tediousness of inactivity, but has enjoyments which are wholly unknown to those who live indolently upon the toils of others. Life affords no higher satisfaction than that of surmounting difficulties, passing from one degree of success to another, forming designs and seeing them accomplished. He that labours in any laudable employment, has his fatigues supported by hope and usually crowned with joy.

How is the barn, the wood house and door yards, Mr. Snuggins? Do you keep them in a husbandlike manner, or is your yard encumbered with brush, old rails, stumps, straw, chips, leached ashes, rotten cabbage, dead cats, old rags and fleas? And the wood house filled with broken ploughs, dislocated wheelbarrows, hog's nests and skunk's skins? And your barn crammed with old barrels, sleighs, wheels, useless rakes, forks, gate posts, guide boards and broken grindstones? Some will have it that a slovenly farmer gets as much profits from his farm as a neat one. But I don't believe it. If a man depend on raising and selling butter and cheese, he is sure to meet a quick market, if he is known to be neat and trim about his husbandry. I could name some, (but I will wait a while,) whose butter and cheese I would no sooner eat than I would the very filth of a jakes.

"Never loose sight of the powerful influence of example, and be careful in the management of your concerns, to recommend by your own personal practice uniform habits of active, interested and persevering diligence to those in your employ."

"Alack, my good lady, there comes Goody Thumper,
With jug by her side, a budget and bumper;
I'll warrant you now, or at least I dare guess,
She longs for new cider as it runs from the press."

"He's a Genius," people said of my young friend Alcansor, and it got to Alcansor's ears, as such things will nine cases out of ten. The youth was promising fair for manhood—with industry and prudence to follow up the advantages he possessed he would have become an ornament to society. But the idea of being a genius haunted him day and night. He put on a thousand ridiculous airs and fell into as many ridiculous practices—become puffed up with vanity and self-conceit and let slip all his golden opportunities in grasping after the foolish phantoms that flitted before his bewildered brain. He turned out a poor creature. Praise did the mischief.

"What a beautiful girl! the young gentlemen used to say, when they passed Jane Seymour's window, and got a glance at her face and pretty figure. It was no wonder they called her beautiful, for she was so. But persuade a young lady she is beautiful, very beautiful, and she must be a girl of extraordinary good sense, if she don't let the thing run in her head, to the exclusion of more profitable thoughts. Jane once cultivated her mind, was industrious and ingenious with her needle—bid fair to become an excellent house-keeper—and she would have been a rare prize, if left to the guidance of her natural judgment. But she soon began to conclude that she was beautiful—that beauty compensated for every thing else. Those of the beaux, who had worth, having thought differently—the others she would not accept, and this misunderstanding lost her a husband. No sensible man ever thought a beautiful wife was worth as much as one who could make a good pudding. I wish the girls all knew this for I feel a great interest in their welfare."

"Beware of self indulgence, no business can possibly thrive under the shade of its influence."

FARMER'S CALENDAR.

"Now make up your cider and see to your swine,
Your cider's best made when the weather is fine—
O never buy whiskey, or brandy, or rum,
While your orchard supplies you with cider at home."

Continue your preparations for winter, and keep pace with your business, and then the cold and storm will not come too soon for you. See that your ploughs, harrows, carts and your farming utensils generally are all carefully and neatly laid up under shelter. Some farmers lose more by the decay of their tools by the exposure of them to the air and moisture than the whole wear of them.

Garden sauce should be gathered and carried into the cellar, before the frost becomes so severe as to injure it. Turnips, beets and carrots should be put down in sand to prevent their withering and becoming pithy.

I observe that too little attention is paid to the making of manure. This is a subject which is worthy the attention of every husbandman. If this business was attended to as it should be, we should soon cease to hear complaints about small crops and worn out lands. The soil is like the tub of meal, if you keep taking away without adding you will in time come to the bottom.

Winter is stealing upon us, but it does not take the wise unawares. He keeps along with his business and keeps even with the seasons; and such an one is not disconcerted by a flaw of wind or a fall of rain. He is prepared to sail with all winds. When the weather does not permit him to labour out a door, he has business to attend to under shelter, which is equally profitable. You folks, who are always lagging, have so many things to attend to, that you never know what to do first, and consequently a great share of the time you do nothing at all.

"Do not assume to yourself more credit for what you do, than you are entitled to, rather be content with a little less; the public mind will always discover where merit is due."

Then should man fall down before him,
And his grateful tribute bring—
We should love, serve and adore him,
And his praises joyful, sing.

FARMER'S CALENDAR.

"Ye honored sires, come, take your great chairs,
Smoke, chat, and drink cider, and bury your cares;"
Let your boys do the business while the cold is severe,
And enjoy by your fires the close of the year.

When will people learn to work it right? It is a fact, which must be obvious to every person of observation, that a broken pane of glass in a room you wish to keep comfortable, costs a cord of wood a winter. Nor will this extra cord of wood make the room comfortable. And still how many windows do we see in the most shattered condition through the severest weather. Some are pasted up with paper which keeps out the light and lets in the cold, and is liable to be beaten out every storm. Others are stuffed with old rags which make a shabby figure, and which sold for paper rags would fetch more money than the glass would cost to supply their place, besides the injury to the health of the family, and to the furniture occasioned by broken windows.

But the year is drawing near its close. The spring has vanished with its beauty, the summer has wasted its strength, the autumn has yielded up her treasures, and

Now winter dreary and severe
Comes on to close the varied year.

To close my observations, I must once more exhort you to see that your schools are well managed, and that your children are well furnished and instructed—balance your accounts with all with whom you have deal, and do not forget to pay the printer—be circumspect in the choice of friends and constant in friendship—do those things which can be done but once, considerately—go not to your doctor for every pain, nor to your lawyer for every quarrel, nor to your bottle for every thirst. Defer none of the concerns of this year to encumber the business of the next.

No more. The month—the year is through,
And I must bid you all adieu.

DECEMBER has 31 days—1823.

Let us worship Him forever,
Who directs the rolling year;
And O let us—let us ever
Our Creator love and fear.

To salt Meat.—Mix brown sugar, bay salt, common salt, each two pounds; salt-petre, 8 ounces, water two gallons; this pickle gives meats a fine red color, while the sugar renders them mild and of an excellent flavor. Large quantities are to be managed by the above proportion.

 Poisoned.

¶ Mr. Carroll first took his seat in Congress on the 18th July, 1776, when the Credentials of the Delegates newly appointed by Maryland, were presented. The following anecdote should not be lost:—After Mr. Carroll was introduced to the President on first taking his seat, he drew his attention to the parchment copy of the Declaration of Independence and invited him to sign it. Mr. Carroll replied, "with great pleasure," and advanced to the table—whilst signing it, a member remarked, in an under tone, "there goes a few millions,"—alluding to the great wealth of Mr. Carroll.

It is a fact proved by the Journals, that the following delegates from Pennsylvania, who signed the Declaration of Independence, were not members of Congress at its date, nor were they appointed as such by the Legislature of Pennsylvania until the 20th of July:—George Clymer, James Smith, George Taylor, James Wilson, George Ross and Benjamin Rush.

†† Voted for Independence, but was not present when the Declaration was signed.

It appears that of the fifty-seven men, who signed the DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE, the birth places of four are unknown: ten were natives of Massachusetts; nine of Virginia; seven of Pennsylvania; five of South-Carolina; four of Maryland; three of New-Jersey; three of Connecticut; two of New-York; two of Delaware; two of Rhode-Island; two of England; one of Ireland, and one of Wales.

The youngest man who signed the declaration of Independence, was Edward Rutledge, of South Carolina, then aged twenty-six years, and the oldest man who signed it, was Benjamin Franklin, then aged seventy years. What a splendid career of usefulness he ran after three score and ten! The average age of all the persons who signed the Declaration, at the time of signing, was a fraction more than forty-four years.

Thomas Lynch, jr. of South Carolina, was but 27 when he signed the Declaration, and died in the 30th year of his age, being the youngest man who died after having signed that most important of all State Papers. It is remarkable that the three youngest men in Congress, July 4, 1776, were all South Carolinians; their ages averaging but 27 years and a third, while that of the whole assembly, their own included, averaged more than 44 years. The average age of the persons who signed the Declaration of Independence, at the time of their death, was sixty-six years and nearly a half year. The one who lived to the greatest age, was William Ellery, of Rhode-Island, who lived to be ninety-two. The only one now alive, Charles Carroll—Health and peace to the evening of his days!

It is not out of place, nor unworthy of remark to say, that an examination of the signatures of those fifty-seven gentlemen, subscribed to the Declaration, will exhibit many excellent specimens of penmanship. It is doubtful whether to any state paper in any country, can be found so many well written names.

Of the members of the Continental Congress, who signed the Declaration of Independence, and of whose occupations we recollect to have had any account twenty-eight were brought up to professional pursuits, five as merchants and three as farmers or planters. Of the professional men, twenty-one were lawyers, six physicians and one a minister.

At a very critical period of the revolutionary war, when there was great difficulty in procuring supplies for the American army, and when there was a danger of its dissolution for want of provisions to keep it together, a number of patriotic gentlemen gave their bonds to the amount of about £260,000, in gold and silver, for procuring them. The provisions were procured, and the army was supplied and kept together. The following are the names of the choice spirits who came forward on that critical occasion:

SITUATION, BOUNDARIES AND EXTENT.

The state of Vermont is situated between 42 degrees and 44 minutes, and 45 degrees north latitude; and between 1 degree 43 minutes, and 3 degrees 36 minutes of east longitude from Philadelphia. It is bounded on the east by the west line of Connecticut river, which separates it from New-Hampshire; on the south by Massachusetts; on the north by the 45th degree of north latitude, which separates it from Lower-Canada; and on the west, by the state of New-York; from which it is separated by the west line of the towns of Pownal, Bennington, Shaftsbury, Arlington, Sandgate, Rupert, Pawlet, Wells and Poultney, and by the middle of the deepest channel of Poultney river, East Bay and Lake Champlain. Its mean width is 65 miles, and mean length 157 1-2 miles, it contains 10,237 1-2 square miles, or 6,552,000 acres.

GOVERNMENT.

The present Constitution of Vermont was adopted by the Convention holden at Windsor, July 4, 1793. According to which, the legislative powers are vested in a house of representatives, chosen annually by the freemen of each organized town, on the first Tuesday of September, of such persons as shall have resided in the state two years.

The Executive Powers are vested in the Supreme Executive Council, which consists of a Governor, Lieutenant Governor, and twelve persons chosen by the freemen of the state, at their meeting holden in each town, on the first Tuesday of September annually. In addition to the usual executive powers, the Governor and Council have power to revise and propose amendments to the laws passed by the House of Representatives; and if the amendments are not concurred in by the house, to suspend their passing until the next session of the Legislature.

The House of Representatives has power, in conjunction with the Governor and Council, to elect, annually, Judges of the Supreme, County and Probate Courts, Sheriffs, Justices of the peace, State's Attornies, and Directors of the State Bank, and in case of vacancy, Major Generals and Brigadier Generals.

The annual session of the Legislature is at Montpelier, on the second Thursday of October.

For the officers of the Government of Vermont since its organization—See Register of 1827.

TO THE LOVERS OF GOOD BEER.

Put two quarts of molasses into a keg of ten gallons cool water.—Boil two ounces allspice, two ounces ginger, two ounces hops, and half a pint of Indian meal, in two or three quarts of water, about an hour—strain it into the keg while hot, add one pint of yeast—shake it well together—stop the keg nearly air tight, and let it stand about twenty-four hours, when it will be fit for use.

Commencing October, 1827, and ending October, 1828.

SIGNS OF A GOOD FARMER.

His corn land is ploughed in the fall—his bull is from two to five years old, and he works him. He seldom lets his work drive him. Has a cooking stove with plenty of pipe to it. The wood lots he possesses are fenced. His sled is housed in summer, and his cart, ploughs and wheelbarrow, winter and summer when not in use; has as many yoke of good oxen as he has horses—Does not feed his hogs with whole grain—Lights may be seen in his house often before break of day in winter—His hog pen is boarded inside and out—Has plenty of weeds and mud in his yard in the fall—All his manure is carried out from his buildings and barn yard twice in the year, and chip dung once a year—His cattle are almost all tied up in the winter—He begins to find out that manure put on land in a green state is the most profitable—Raises three times as many turnips and potatoes for his stock as he does for his family—Has a good ladder raised against the roof of his house—Has more lamps in his house than candlesticks—Has a house on purpose to keep his ashes in, and an iron or tin vessel to take them up—He has a large barn and a small house—seldom has more pigs than cows—adjoining his hog pen he has a hole to put weeds and sods, and makes three loads of best manure from every old hog and two from every pig. A good farmer in this country begins to find out that steaming vegetables can be done at one third the expense of boiling—and that Mangel Wurtzel, Millet, Altringham Carrot, and Ruta Baga are things worth thinking of—he fences before he ploughs and manures before he sows—He deals more for cash than on credit.

Rules for the management of Stock.—The size of cattle should never be above that which the pastures can support in a thriving condition. No attempts should be made to raise them to an undue size by crossing. Animals intended for the butcher should be kept in a state of regular improvement. The best pastures should be allotted to that portion of the stock which goes first to the market; the next in quality, to the breeders; and the worst pasture, to the inferior, or growing stock. Great care should be taken not to overstock pasture, which is attended with great loss to the farmer, and the community. This ought to be particularly avoided in regard to young and growing animals. If they are kept poor, during one part of the year, they will scarcely thrive during the remainder; and, when ill fed, will never attain to their proper size and proportion. Lastly; the food, whatever it may be, should not be too suddenly changed. It is seldom profitable to bring lean animals immediately from coarse to rich pastures; and a change from dry to succulent food, or the reverse, should be gradually effected. A change of pasture, however, of the same quality, tends to produce a greater accumulation of fat.

Cutting of Grain.—It is the opinion of experienced husbandmen, that wheat should be cut down some days before it is fully or dead ripe. The grain hardens well in the sheaf; the sample is better; and there is nothing lost in measure by this mode of management. The harvest thus begins earlier, and its labours are more equally distributed. Barley ought likewise to be cut down before it is ripe; otherwise the straw becomes brittle, and much loss is occasioned by the heads breaking off. Though oats are reckoned a hardy grain, yet the more early varieties, being liable to damage from high winds, or from exposure to much heat, ought to be cut as soon as they are nearly ripe, in order to lessen the risks to which they are exposed. An experienced farmer states, that all sorts of grain ought to be cut whenever the straw, immediately below the ear is so dry, that, on twisting it, no juice can be expressed; for then the grain cannot improve, as the circulation of the juices to the ear is stopped. It matters not, that the stock below is green. Every hour that the grain stands uncut, after passing this stage, is attended with loss.

Beware of cold water.—If neither the voice of reason, says Doctor Rush, nor the fatal examples of those who have perished from this cause, are sufficient to produce restraint in drinking a large quantity of cold liquors, when the body is preternaturally heated, then let me venture to give the following advice. 1. Grasp the vessel out of which you are about to drink, for a minute or longer, with both your hands. This will abstract a portion of heat from the body, and impart heat at the same time to the cold liquor, provided the vessel is made of metal, glass, or earth. 2. If you are not furnished with a cup, and are obliged to drink by bringing your mouth in contact with a stream which issues from a pump, or a spring, always wash your hands and face, previously to your drinking, with a little of the cold water. By this means a portion of the heat is conveyed away from the body.

How to avoid the Dysentery.—Dr. Rush advises, as a preventive of this disease, that spices, and particularly Cayenne pepper, and the red peppers of our own country, should be taken with our daily food. Mr. Dewer, a British surgeon, informs us, that the French, while in Egypt, frequently escaped the diseases of the country, by carrying pepper with them to eat with the fruits of the land. Purging physic should also be taken, as any medicine of a laxative nature, by preventing costiveness, will act as a preservative from this disease. Glauber or Epsom salts are particularly recommended. Molasses, eaten plentifully, acts as a preventive, by keeping the bowels in a laxative state. Another rule to be observed, is, to avoid exposure to the dampness of the night air. When necessarily exposed, the bowels should be more carefully protected than any other parts of the body. These directions emanate from a high source; and deserve serious consideration.

Accounts.—Regular accounts are not so common among Farmers as they ought to be; and in this repect, persons employed in other professions are much more attentive and correct. The advantage to be derived from regular accounts, cannot be doubted. By examining them, a Farmer is enabled to ascertain the nature and the extent of the expense he has incurred, in the various operations of agriculture; and to discover what particular measure, or what general system, contributes to profit, or occasions loss. The principle of economy may thus be introduced into the management of a farm; and the lessening of expense effected. It is proper to add, that to record pecuniary transactions, is not the only object to be attended to in the accounts of a Farmer. It is necessary to have an annual account of the live stock and of their value at the time; of the quantity of hay unconsumed; of the grain in store, or in the stack-yard; and of the implements and other articles in which the capital is invested. An account, detailing the expense and return of each field, according to its productive contents, is likewise essential. Without this, it is impossible to calculate the advantage of different rotations; the most beneficial mode of managing a farm; or the improvements of which it is susceptible.

Hog-sty.—This building should contain one apartment in which the swine shall be perfectly dry, and well provided with straw for their bed. Another part of it should be open, and without a wooden floor; for swine will not well bear to be wholly secluded from the weather. Besides, this open part may be extended, so as to afford a fine place for making manure. It should be lowest in the middle, and no water should ever run from it. With proper care, many loads of valuable manure will be made every year, where these animals are kept. The trough should be made fast at the upper side; and if the edges are covered with iron, it will be well. There should be stakes before it, so thick that one swine only can get his head between any two of them. The keeping of swine is very profitable to the farmer. Indian corn is the best food for them, but it should be ground, or boiled till it is soft. Like human creatures, however, they require some variety in their food. Steamed potatoes may be given them with much advantage.

The Moon.—Take care to procure good seed for all the crops you intend to raise, and have it sown early, have your grounds well prepared, and let them be well tended, and regard the Moon as much, and as little, as you please.

COMMENCEMENT OF THE SEASONS.

Spring begins March 20th, 3h. 44m. evening.
Summer — June 21st, 1h. 15m. evening.
Autumn — Sept. 23d, 3h. 24m. morning.
Winter — Dec. 21st, 8h. 26m. evening.

To make Oats prove doubly nutritious to horses.—Instead of grinding the oats, break them in a mill; and the same quantity will prove doubly nutritious. Another method is, to boil the corn, and give the horses the liquor in which it has been boiled; the result will be, that instead of six bushels in a crude state, three bushels so prepared will be found to answer, and to keep the animals in superior vigor and condition.

Those who early accustom themselves to reading, reflection and rational amusement, will find themselves enabled to render the winter of their days calm and pleasant.

FARMER'S CALENDAR.

'Winter has come from the icy seas,
Where the bleak winds blow and the salt waves freeze,
Where the sun shines on through a long day's light,
And at last gives place to a long—long night.'

Time wings his steady flight—the seasons walk their round—empires and individuals rise, decline and fall and all things are quickly moving towards that bourne whence eternity begins. Another year with all its varied scenes—its joys—its sorrows—is closed upon the world, and its annals are inscribed in the book of God's remembrance, in eternity to be read to us who acted, or had a part to act, in its momentous scenes. That year is now beyond our reach. Its mispent hours can never be recalled. Repining is in vain. 'Twill not atone our sins nor procure for them forgiveness. Then do your duty now, and hereafter, and trust the past with God, your Maker. The penitent and reformed he will forgive and bless their humble efforts, when they strive to mend their lives and conduct. Then with the year begin anew thy life, and through the same keep pace with business and with duty. Let not a moment's time in idleness be wasted. You have a mind and heart as well as farm to cultivate, and when the latter is covered with snow the former claim attention. Plant in your minds the seeds of knowledge, and in your hearts the seeds of virtue and religion, and carefully cultivate the tender plants.

Your barns now require particular attention, and you should see to them with your own eyes. Boys may save you some steps, but they must not be too far trusted or depended upon. See that your hay is not wasted, your cattle may feel the want of it before summer. Suffer not the roads in your neighborhood to be blocked with snow. Public spirit is a noble virtue, the want of it abject meanness.

The Greeks ascribe the invention of hours to Anaximander, who probably received it from the Chaldeans. It has recently been ascertained that the division of the day into hours was known to and adopted by the Hindoos from their earliest ages.

"Dark flitting round a mouldering tower,
I spied a strangely awful form,
And swifter moved the hastening power,
And louder roared the crashing storm.

FARMER'S CALENDAR.

'Where the wild Aurora brilliantly plays,
Darting its beautiful lance-like rays;
Where the white bear sits with his shaggy form,
And howls to the roar of the beating storm.'

"Most men spend their lives in anticipations, in determining to be vastly happy at some period or other when they have time. But the present time has one advantage over every other—it is our own. Past opportunities are gone, future are not come. We may lay in a stock of pleasure, as we would lay in a stock of wine; but if we defer tasting them too long, we shall find that both are soured by age. Let our happiness, therefore, be a modest mansion, which we can inhabit while we have our health and vigour to enjoy it; not a fabric so vast and expansive that it has cost us the best part of our lives to build it, and which we can expect to occupy only when we have less occasion for a habitation than a tomb. It has been well observed that we should treat futurity as an aged friend from whom we expect a rich legacy. Let us do nothing to forfeit his esteem, and treat him with respect, not with servility. But let us not be too prodigal when young, nor too parsimonious when old, otherwise we shall fall into the common error of those, who when they had the power to enjoy had not the prudence to acquire; and when they had the prudence to acquire had no longer the power to enjoy."

He who idles away his time at the tavern, or lounges at the grogshop, while his poor wife and children are shivering over a handful of faggots at home, hungry, ragged and disconsolate, deserves not the name of husband, father, citizen or patriot. He may have the shape of a man, but he has the heart of a brute. The grogshop is the vortex of ruin, and ardent spirits drown more than all the streams, and other water upon the earth.

"Familiarise yourself with your books, keep them accurately, and frequently investigate and adjust their contents. This is an important item."

FEBRUARY hath 28 days—1829.

'Twas time, on firy pinions driven,
For vollied lightnings rent the sky;
The clouds with hissing bolts were riven,
And ruin roll'd in thunder by.

Venus will be morning star till the 20th of May—thence evening star till the end of the year.

But soon is heard the voice of spring;
Is heard the flap of the warbler's wing:
The snows dissolve and flow amain,
In torrents upon the deluged plain.

Do not think of knocking out another persons brains because he happens to differ from you. Your own opinions are by no means the same as they used to be, and it would be just as rational to knock yourself on the head because you differ from yourself ten years ago! It is one thing to be stiff and another to be steady in an opinion. The steady man changes when reason requires it, but the stiff necked is at war with all reason.

All who have suitable trees should now be in readiness for the manufacture of maple sugar. He who now makes one pound of sugar from the produce of his own lands, adds so much to the stock of our national wealth; whereas that stock is diminished in the same degree by every pound purchased from abroad. Besides sugar made at home must possess a sweeter flavor to an independent Amerian of the north, than that which is mingled with the groans and tears of slavery. And now to avoid being importuned and fretted at all summer, you will find it to your advantage to get out your flax. When there is so much storm and bluster out a door, we should endeavor by all means in our power, to cultivate peace within. A good husband almost invariably makes a good wife, and good parents, good children; so you see all depends upon you gentlemen.

Your cattle and sheep now require your strictest attention. Much may be now lost by a very little neglect. If your hay crumbles sprinkle it with brine. Old Boreas is now making his last efforts. He will soon have to yield, and retreat to his northern cave.

"He who never changed any of his opinions, never corrected any of his mistakes; and he who was never wise enough to find mistakes in himself, will not be charitable enough to excuse them in others."

MARCH hath 31 days—1829.

Then came a voise like rivers pent,
Between two mountains' craggy sides
Like Erie, o'er its cascade sent,
And hoarser than the ocean tides."

Winter is gone to the dens of the north;
The verdure of spring is peeping forth,
To deck the earth with beauties rare,
And mingle fragrance in the balmy air.

See that your fences are repaired early and thoroughly. Cattle, sheep and horses will do much injury at this season, if permitted to range in your orchards, your meadows and your fields. And if you put up your fences in a slight manner so that your cattle once break through them, you may thank your stars if you ever keep them within any bounds afterwards. It is with cattle as with men, one offence leads to the commission of many more. It is much easier to prevent transgression than to reform the transgressor.

Spring grain may be sown on dry lands as soon as the frost is out, and garden vegetables for summer use should be sown the latter part of this month. Enter upon your business this month with the full determination to keep pace with your business through the year. If you once fall behind your business, instead of driving it, you will be dragged, and if you are dragged you may be both stripped and bruised.

Be neither prodigal of your money, nor on the other hand too parsimonious. 'A prodigal may start with ten thousand pounds, and die worth nothing; a miser may start with nothing, and die worth ten thousand pounds. It has been asked which had the best of it? I should presume the prodigal of the two. He has spent a fortune, the miser has only left one—he has lived rich to die poor; the miser has lived poor to die rich; and if the prodigal quits life in debt to others, the miser quits it still deeper in debt to himself.' Balance then the account between thyself and others and die in debt to neither.

"It is easy to be upright in prosperity, it is the day of adversity that proves the heart.

It is a brave mind that exults not over a fallen foe,—it is a weak one, that tramples on him.

"Every man hath just as much vanity as he wants understanding."

"Oh, sluggard! while thy life but dreams,
Its every pulse of pleasure dead
In slumber; while the morning beams
Play round thy hea'o.

FARMER'S CALENDAR

The groves put on their dress of green;—
Opening flowers enliven the scene—
The ploughman jogs the fields along,
And cheers his team with a merry song.

If it be true, as says the proverb, that an idle man's brains are the Devil's workshop, the old gentleman's business must have very much increased of late, if forsooth his business may be judged of by the number of shops he occupies. Eject him from the premises, down with his sign, neighbors! But to be serious, Idleness is truly the hot bed of temptation, the cradle of disease and the canker worm of felicity. In a little time, to the man who has no employment, life will have no novelty, and when novelty is laid in the grave the funeral of comfort will enter the church yard. From that moment it is the shade and not the man, who creeps along the path of mortality. On the contrary, what solid satisfaction does the man of diligence possess; what health in his countenance; what strength in his limbs; what vigour in his understanding; with what a zest does he relish the refreshments of the day; with what pleasure does he seek the bed of repose at night. It is not the accidental hardness of a pillow that can make him unhappy and rob him of sleep. He earns his maintenance and he enjoys it. He has faithfully laboured in the day and the slumbers of the night are a sweet retribution to him. To the diligent man, every day is a little life, and every night a little heaven. 'The toil has been honest, the reward is sure.' Having set before you the consequences of idleness and of diligence, choose you this day which you will follow. The one will lead you to misery, contempt and death, the other, to respectability, comfort and happiness.

Maxim.—In eternity there is nothing to gain; nothing to lose. All is either gained or lost for ever. In time, there is an eternity to gain, or an eternity to lose. Not an instant here, but tells in the account hereafter. Life places you in that pregnant crisis, between a world of mourning and a world of joy.

What joy! to catch the fragrant gales,
With pinions sweeping as they play,
O'er each fair flow'ret that exhales
The breath of May.

FARMER'S CALENDAR.

While the thrush and the blackbird sing,
And tune their notes to the parting spring;
And while bleating lambkins play,
And insects skip in the sunny ray.

"Sweet is the breath of morn, her rising sweet
With charm of earliest birds; pleasant the sun
When first on this delightful land he spreads
His orient beams on herb, tree, fruit and flower,
Glistening with dew."

Those persons, almost without exception, who have lived to a very advanced age, have been distinguished as early risers, and it is very generally admitted that no habit contributes more, than early rising, to our health and happiness. Why then is it not more generally adopted? Why do we waste so many of the sweetest, most delightful and invigorating moments of each day upon our pillows? turning upon our bed as the door turneth upon its hinges? At this season especially, the morning breathes perfumes, the air is melody and the whole face of nature is beauty. How congenial to the feelings, and especially to "the feelings of joyous youth, in whose bosom fond hopes are swelling, and delightful visions of future success and pleasure rise one after another, in untiring succession. To such, the charms of an undisturbed hour of romance accompanied by all the bright and beautiful images which a fine morning presents to the eye and imagination, need only to be known to be dear. The still beauty of the hour at once tranquilizes the vulgar passions, which a vulgar world nourishes and foments and awakens those softer and purer emotions, which are so much more congenial to the high destiny of the human soul. Health, too, as well as moral purity breathes in the air of a spring morning; and female loveliness itself becomes more lovely under its refreshing and vivifying influence." If then you pursue pleasure, beauty, business or health

Rise before the sun and when his journey's run,
And he 's sunk in the west, retire to rest.

What joy; to hear the quaver'd song,
That shames the brow of sloth and care,
In grateful numbers float along
The peopled air.

Now the flowers that deck'd the field,
To the growing fruit their stations yield,
And labor with his brawny face,
Braves the heat of the sultry days.

A word to my fair country women! But not in that dictatorial strain in which I am accustomed to address my own sex. They are not to be driven. If moved at all it must be by the mild and gentle accents of flattery and persuasion. "Good morning Mrs. Cleanly. I am extremely happy in finding you and your lovely daughters employed in the dairy room. I have frequently purchased of your butter and cheese in the market, have admired the neatness with which it was put up, and the richness and sweetness of its flavor, and have observed that it met a ready sale two or three cents in advance of that of ordinary quality. Now I perceive that every thing at home is in accordance with the butter and cheese sent abroad—every thing is sweet and neat."

Let all our fair dairy women copy the example of the Cleanly family, and our olfactories and palate would cease to be annoyed by rancid butter and cheese. The sweet flavour of their butter is not destroyed by age. For the sake of those who would make good butter, if they knew how, I shall give you a brief statement of the method pursued by Mrs. Cleanly so far as I can recollect it. Her pans are kept clean and sweet. Her milk is not suffered in hot weather to stand more than 24 hours before it is skimmed. The cream is frequently stirred, and is churned every other day. When well freed from butter milk, it is salted with a preparation made of one part of sugar, one of nitre, and two of clean common salt, well beat together, at the rate of one ounce of the preparation to every pound of the butter. If you wish your butter to keep sweet for a considerable time, try it ladies.

A pretty girl was lately complaining that she was sadly troubled in her lips by chaps. "Friend," said Obadiah, "thee should not let the chaps come near thy lips."

The strength of summer is wasting fast,
The lightnings flash to the roaring blast;
The fields are losing their cheerful green,
And the clustering fruits on the boughs are seen.

"There is no point in which a great of part our farmers err so much, as in tilling such large quantities of land as they do. Four acres, closely fenced, well manured, and kept clean and well stirring, will produce more corn than ten acres in the common mode of fencing, manuring and tending. Further these four acres of ground will be enriched by the manure not absorbed by the crop of corn, so as to produce a greater crop the next year than the ten acres that were planted without, or with little manure. Add to this, the personal labour, loss of time, wear of implements, worth of seed and loss of flesh in horses and cattle when ten acres are cultivated for the produce of four, and the balance in favor of tilling only a small portion of what it is common to till, will appear surprizingly great."—Farmers, if you have never made an experiment of this kind you will find your advantage in trying it.

Toil and be strong, but if you would be strong in reality, you must learn temperance, friends, and bear without reproach the choice of water. Ardent spirits, afford no nourishment, and though they may for a little while elevate the animal spirits above their ordinary level. they are sure to ebb to an equal degree below. Many seem to imagine that it is necessary, at this season, to build up a fire within in order to balance the heat that acts upon us from without. Were the outsides of our houses exposed to flames, we should hardly think of preventing them by scattering fire within. To allay thirst in hot weather I find nothing better than milk and water, or sweetened water mingled with vinegar or ginger. These are victuals and drink too.

Reputation. The way, according to Socrates, to obtain a good reputation, is to endeavor to be what you desire to appear.

FARMER'S CALENDAR.

The hills and the vallies their bounties pour,
To fill with plenty the farmer's store;
The flower of summer is withered and dead,
And the rustling leaves are sear and red.

It is one thing to give good advice and quite another thing to follow it. Every man is ready to do the former, but few, very few, the latter, and I am very fearful that my sage instructions will be permitted to pass by you like the idle winds which you respect not. But shall I on that account keep silence? No. I will cry aloud and spare not, whether you will hear, or forbear. If you follow my advice, yours will be the reward for so doing, but if you do not, you will suffer the consequences without exciting a particle of my compassion. Attend strictly to your business. Business before friends is an old maxim, and taken in its proper sense, is a very good one. Not that our friends are to be neglected or slighted, for the sake of attending to business; but that we should not suffer our crops to remain in the field to be destroyed by storms and vermin, while we make or receive long visits. Secure your crops and get fairly up with your business and then you have my permission to spend a few days at this pleasant season in visiting your friends.

It is much better, and in the end, less mortifying, to be laughed at than ruined; better to have a wife, who like Martial's Mamurra, cheapens every thing and buys nothing, than to be impoverished by one whose vanity will purchase every thing and whose pride will cheapen nothing. A rich carpet, looking-glass, sideboard and the like are well enough, for those who can afford them, but ill become the parlour of him who has to be dunned for his taxes. Remember that he who follows fashion and buys every thing, will soon come to nothing.

"Dispatch at once, if possible, whatever you may take in hand; if interrupted by unavoidable interference, resume and finish it as soon as the obstruction is removed."

SEPTEMBER hath 30 days—1829.

When the summer unfoldeth her charms,
For the soul of contemplative mirth,
His sun still enlightens and warms,
His the air that refreshes the earth.

OCTOBER—tenth month.

FARMER'S CALENDAR.

The leaves are fast falling and the wane of the year,
Loudly proclaims that the winter is near;
When the streams shall be mute and the tuneful breath
Be closed from our clime, or hush'd into death.

Let us endeavour to secure all the rewards, which the Giver of all good has bestowed upon the labour of our hands during the summer and autumn. Let none of them be wasted through neglect; if all is preserved there will be sufficent, so that the poor and the rich shall be filled and peace and happiness be established in our borders. How encouraging is the business of agriculture! If any man is to be envied it is the farmer, who derives his subsistence from the produce of his own lands. Who so independent! If a man can be happy any where it is upon a snug little farm, with now and then a visit from his friends. With what satisfaction does he draw for them the mug of cider, or the glass of currant wine of his own manufacture! But if instead of a friend he chance to be called on by a sheriff with an execution in his pocket, or by a collector with a bill of last year's taxes, alas, poor soul, he may seek enjoyment in one place as well as another. I tell you what, friend, if you would get along smoothly, prosperously and happily, you must make your calculations to keep pretty much out of debt and never let your taxes lay unpaid after they become due. Your corn may grow luxuriantly, your hogs, sheep and cattle may fatten, and your garners may be filled with the exuberance of the field, still you will be continually in a state of vexation unless you are out of debt. Drunkenness is the vice of a good constitution or of a bad memory; of a constitution so treacherously good that it never bends until it breaks: or of a memory that recollects the pleasures of getting drunk, but forgets the pains of getting sober.

"Do not assume to yourself more credit for what you do, than you are entitled to, rather be content with a little less; the public mind will always discover where merit is due."

NOVEMBER—eleventh month, 1829.

'Though the spring tide of life is around thee now
The elastic step and the shining brow
And the auburn hair that curling flows;—
Yet the winter of age will bring its snows.'

The diligent and circumspect farmer is now in a state of preparation for winter, and every one should be of this class. Prepared or unprepared, winter may come upon you like a thief in the night. Strive therefore to be in readiness. Let your buildings be tight and warm. Let you windows be mended if they need it, and not by stuffing them with rags. Let your yards be freed from brush and logs and stumps; which when covered with snow might cause many a broken shin unless removed. Not long since I had occasion to take a short journey in company with my cousin Ned. As we approached a house, which had the appearance of having been once the abode of industry, wealth and comfort, but which was now their exact counterpart. "Here," says Ned, "is a fine picture for you. It will make an excellent frontispiece for the Register. This was once the seat of the worthy John Goodman, Esq. His only son George now occupies it, but he is no more like his father than I am like Hercules. George was brought up to no business, but that of spending money, which, since the old gentleman's death, he has closely followed, till of late he has got out of stock. Poor soul! Look at the shabby old dwelling, filled with ragged children, surrounding a disconsolate mother, without food, fire or clothes. Alas, this is the usual result of youthful indulgence and folly. Train up a child in idleness and supply him with money and you train for misery and ruin.' Secure your cellars from the frost—Pay your debts—Listen to no tattlers—Employ no quacks—Drink no drams.

"Cultivate domestic habits, for this your family, if you have one, has a strong and undeniable claim; besides, your customers will always be best pleased when they find you at home, or at the place of your business."

NOVEMBER hath 30 days—1829.

Till the evening, with sad, silent tread,
Moves mournful and slow to the west,
The sun sinks in ocean's blue bed,
And points to eternity's rest.

FARMER'S CALENDAR.

'But there is a scene, as good men teach,
Where the chill blight of winter, never can reach;
Where the winter of life shall ever be o'er.
And the storm of death will wither no more.'

Book-keeping is a branch of education too little attended to in our schools and too little practiced by our farmers and mechanics. Every man ought to have an account book and to understand and carefully to practice keeping accounts. There is but little trouble in settling with our neighbours, if each one keeps an exact account of debt and credit, and is careful to adjust them once a year.

Of beings, who call themselves human, a busybody is one of the most detestable. One would think that we had quite enough of our own concerns to employ us without meddling with the affairs of others; yet we find many, very many, who are so much engaged in other people's matters that they have no time to attend to their own. One such person is often sufficient to keep a whole neighbourhood, yea, a whole town, in a continual dispute and jargon. Let every one mend one, and then we shall have a peaceable and pleasant neighbourhood; or in other words, let every one reform one, and there will be a general reformation.

You have now an opportunity of educating your children, and what better can you give them than a good education. Riches may take to themselves wings and fly away, honors may wither and fade, but a good education with habitual improvement, will abide by them, and be a perpetual source of pleasure and profit, though business and money and friends should fail them. But the time is short—employ it to the best purpose. Enjoy the reward of your toil. Be grateful for the bounties of Heaven. Cultivate your moral and intellectual faculties—live in peace—maintain a conscience void of offence.

"Let no common amusements interfere or mingle with your business; make them entirely distinct employments."

DECEMBER hath 31 days—1829.

So the stern winter season erewhile,
And the tempest that threaten'd above,
Shall yield to the durable smile
Of spring ever blooming in love.

Vermont.

SITUATION, BOUNDARIES AND EXTENT.

THE state of Vermont is situated between 42 degrees and 44 minutes, and 45 degrees north latitude; and between 1 degree 43 minutes, and 3 degrees 36 minutes of east longitude from Philadelphia. It is bounded on the east by the west line of Connecticut river, which separates it from New-Hampshire; on the south by Massachusetts; on the north by the 45th degree of north latitude, which separates it from Lower-Canada; and on the west, by the state of New-York; from which it is separated by the west line of the towns of Pownal, Bennington, Shaftsbury, Arlington, Sandgate, Rupert, Pawlet, Wells, and Poultney, and by the middle of the deepest channel of Poultney, river, East Bay, and Lake Champlain. Its mean width is 65 miles, and mean length 157 1-2 miles, it contains 10,237 1-2 square miles, or 6,552,000 acres.

DIVISION.

The first division of the territory of Vermont into counties, took place in 1765, while the government of New-York claimed jurisdiction over it. The southwestern parts were then annexed to the county of Albany, and the northwestern parts were erected into a county by the name of Charlotte. Cumberland county was formed of the southeastern parts, and Gloucester county of the northeastern. The Green Mountains form the only natural division. These mountains extend quite through the state from south to north, and, following the western range, divide it very nearly into two equal parts.

The state is now divided into thirteen counties, which are subdivided into 245 townships and 16 gores. The townships are generally about six miles square; the gores are much smaller. The names of the counties and shire towns, and the number of towns and gores in each county, in 1824, are exhibited in the following

GOVERNMENT.

The present Constitution of Vermont was adopted by the Convention holden at Windsor, July 4, 1793. According to which, the legislative powers are vested in a house of representatives, chosen annually by the freemen of each organized town, on the first Tuesday of September, of such persons as shall have resided in the state two year.

The Executive Powers are vested in the Supreme Executive Council, which consists of a Governor, Lieutenant Governor, and twelve persons chosen by the freemen of the state, at their meeting holden in each town, on the first Tuesday of September annually. In addition to the usual executive powers, the Governor and Council have power to revise and propose amendments to the laws passed by the house of representatives; and if the amendments are not concurred in by the house, to suspend their passing until the next session of the legislature.

The House of Representatives has power, in conjunction with the Governor and Council, to elect, annually, Judges of the Supreme, County and Probate Courts, Sheriffs, Justices of the peace, State's Attornies, and Directors of the State Bank, and in case of vacancy, Major Generals and Brigadier Generals.

The annual session of the Legislature is at Montpelier, on the second Thursday of October.

JUDICIARY OF THE UNITED STATES.

The Judicial power of the United Staes is vested in one Supreme Court, and in such inferior courts as congress from time to time may establish. The present judicial establishment of the U. States consists of a Supreme Court, of twenty-eight District Courts, and seven Circuit Courts, which are thus organized: the Supreme Court is composed of one Chief Justice and six Associate Justices, who hold a Court in the City of Washington annually; besides which, each of these Justices attends in a certain Circuit, comprising two or more districts, appropriated to each, and together with the Judge of the District, compose a Circuit Court, which is holden in each District of the Circuit. The District Courts are held, respectively, by the District Judge alone. Appeals are allowed from the District to the Circuit Courts, and from the Circuit to the Supreme Court; and, in some cases, where the inconvenience of attending the court by a justice of the Supreme Court is very great, the District Courts are invested with Circuit Court powers.

MILITIA OF VERMONT.

The militia of the state consists of all the able bodied males, with a few exceptions made by law, between the age of 18 and 45 years. Each soldier is required to keep himself constantly provided with such arms and equipments, as are necessary for actual service, and, by so doing, his poll is exempted from taxation. The whole militia is, at present, divided into four divisions, 10 brigades and 35 regiments, with from eight to 12 companies in each. Belonging to most of the regiments are also one company of cavalry, one of artillery and one of light infantry, and in many cases more than one of each. The governor is captain general and commander in chief, and with the advice of the council is to arrange the whole militia into divisions, brigades, &c. and may from time to time, make such alterations as he shall see fit. Each division is commanded by a major general, with a division inspector, a division quarter master and two aids; each brigade by a brigadier general, with a brigade inspector, brigade quarter master, and one aid; each regiment by a colonel, lieutenant colonel and major, with the customary staff; and each company by a captain, lieutenant and ensign, with the customary non-commissioned officers. The major generals and brigadier generals are appointed by the legislature. The field officers are chosen by the commissioned officers of their respective regiments, and the several companies elect their own officers. The whole militia of the state amount to about 25,000.

POPULATION.

There have been but four complete enumerations of the inhabitants of this state since the organization of its government, the first of which was in 1791. In 1771, there was a census of the two counties of Cumberland and Gloucester, which then comprehended all

By the census of 1820, the population of the state consisted of 117,313 white males, 117,533 white females, 438 coloured males, and 465 coloured females. Of these 50,951 were engaged in agriculture, 4,484 in manufacture and 776 in commerce.

the territory of Vermont between the Green Mountains and the Connecticut river. This census gave a population, in those two counties, of 3947; and the population of the whole state was at that time estimated at about 7000. The results of the four subsequent enumerations are exhibited in the following

LITERATURE.

There is scarcely a state in the Union in which useful knowledge is more generally diffused than in Vermont. Every town is divided into school districts in which schools are supported during the greatest part of the year. A part, and in many cases all of the money for the support of these schools is raised upon the Grand List, in consequence of which our schools are open to the poor as well as the rich, and equal privileges are enjoyed by all. Possessing such advantages, a man, or a woman, who is unable to read and write, is a prodigy indeed. Besides our common schools, we have one, or more, academies established in most of the counties in the state, where our youth can acquire a good English Education, or prepare for admission into college. We have also three higher institutions, viz. The Vermont University, Middlebury College, and The Vermont Academy of Medicine, all of which are flourishing seminaries.

The University of Vermont was established at Burlington by an act of the Legislature passed November 3, 1791. The act of incorporation was so altered in 1810, as to increase the number of Trustees to 15 besides the ex officio members, and in 1823 the number was increased in the whole to 28. The ex officio members of the corporation are the Governor of the state, the Speaker of the House of Representatives and the President of the University. The Trustees are appointed by the Legislature. This seminary went into operation in the year 1800, under the Presidency of the Rev. Daniel C. Sanders. The College edifice, completed in 1801, was an elegant brick building four stories high, 160 feet long, 75 feet wide in the central part, and 45 on the wings, containing a Chapel, a Philosophical Hall, a Medical Hall, a Chemical Hall, a Library, a Museum with a Cabinet for Minerals, two Society Halls, a Recitation Hall, and 46 rooms for students. This spacious and valuable edifice was accidentally consumed by fire on the 27th of May, 1824.

Middlebury College was established by the Legislature, November 1, 1800; and by the name of "The President and Fellows of Middlebury College," the Trustees have all the powers of an independent Corporation and may elect or remove the members of their own body. The number of Trustees is not limited by the act of incorporation. The present number is about thirty. Instruction was commenced in this institution in the year 1800, under the Presidency of the Rev. Jeremiah Atwater. There are two College edifices; one of wood, containing the public rooms and erected before the College was incorporated; the other has been built since, is of granular limestone, four stories high, 106 feet long and 40 wide, containing 48 rooms.

The Vermont Academy of Medicine was incorporated by the Legislature, October 29, 1813, and established at Castleton. In October, 1819, the Legislature, by an additional act, gave to the President and Professors power to give and confer those honors and degrees usually given in such seminaries. Public Lectures were first given in this seminary in the fall of 1818. Convenient buildings are erected, containing rooms for giving lectures and for the accommodation of students.

HISTORY.

Our limits will permit us to notice only a few of the most important particulars relating to the history of Vermont. It appears that the first discoveries, in this part of the interior of North America, were made by Samuel Champlain, a French nobleman. After having established a colony at Quebec, in the spring of 1609, he proceeded up the St. Lawrence and river Sorell, and explored and gave his own name to lake Champlain, which washes the western borders of Vermont. He was the first European, who ever visited this territory. But notwithstanding this part of the country was thus early explored, a long period elapsed before any settlements were made. The first European settlements were commenced along the sea shore, and gradually extended into the interior. The French began a colony at Quebec, in 1608; the Dutch began one at New-York, in 1614, and the British one at Plymouth, in 1620. These settlements continued slowly to advance towards the territory of Vermont, but no settlement was made within the present limits of the state, previous to the year 1724. This year the provincial government of Massachusetts built fort Dummer on Connecticut river, in the county of Windham. The French were, in the mean time, making their advances up the St. Lawrence. In 1731, they built a fort at Crown Point, and, at the same time, commenced a settlement nearly opposite to it on the east side of lake Champlain. This was the first European settlement within the state on the west side of the mountains, as that at fort Dummer was on the east.

This tract of country lying between the provinces of Great Britain and France, which, with their Indian allies, were engaged in almost perpetual warfare; its settlement became highly dangerous, and the progress of population was consequently, for some years, extremely slow. In 1760, Canada fell into the hands of Great Britain, which put an end to hostilities in this quarter, and to the danger of settling the country.—From this period the settlement of the state began to advance with great rapidity.

The tract of country situated west of Connecticut river, and now known by the name of Vermont, was originally claimed both by New Hampshire and New-York. New-Hampshire began to make grants of townships within this tract in 1649, at which time commenced a violent controversy between the two provinces, which continued till the year 1764, when the matter was decided by the king and council in favour of New-York, and the western banks of Connecticut river declared to be the western boundary of New-Hampshire. The grants which had been made by the governor of New-Hampshire, during this period, had amounted to 138. These grants, the government of New-York, by a forced construction of the royal decree, declared to be void, and called upon the settlers to surrender their charters, and purchase new titles to their lands of the governor of New-York, at very exhorbitant prices. Some of the towns complied with this unjust requisition, and took out new charters, but they generally refused. Upon this commenced the celebrated controversy between Vermont, then called the "New-Hampshire grants," and New-York, which was continued with great violence during a period of 26 years. Those lands which the settlers refused to repurchase, were granted to others by the governor of New-York, and actions of ejectment brought, and judgment obtained against the settlers in the courts at Albany. The settlers soon found that they had nothing to hope from the customary forms of law, and, therefore, determined upon resistance to the arbitrary and cruel decisions of the court, till his majesty's pleasure should be further known. Having fairly purchased their lands of one royal governor, they were determined, not willingly, to submit and repurchase them of another, and when the executive officers of New-York came to eject the inhabitants from their possessions, they met with a vowed opposition, and were not suffered to proceed in the execution of their offices. The settlers, who resisted, were consequently indicted as rioters, but the court at Albany found it impracticable to carry any of its decisions against the settlers into execution. The sheriffs were openly resisted, and, in some cases, cruelly handled, and the New-York militia could not be prevailed upon to employ arms in compelling the submission of their neighbors to such cruel mandates.

At the head of the opposition were Ethan Allen and Seth Warner; bold, enterprising, independent and undaunted spirits, alike unmoved by threats, or flattery. By their writings and other means, they stirred up the minds of the people, who met in the several towns, appointed committees of safety, and concerted measures for the common welfare. It is a matter of regret that the record of the proceedings of these committees, is now lost. Their principal object was, however, resistance to the high claims of New-York. In 1774, the government of New-York passed an act which put an end to all prospect of reconciliation. It declared that, unless the offenders surrendered themselves to the authority of New-York within the space of 70 days, they should, if indicted for a capital offence, in a court of that colony, be convicted of felony, and suffer death without benefit of clergy. At the same time, a proclamation was issued by the governor, offering a reward of 50 pounds for the apprehension of Ethan Allen, Seth Warner and six others who had distinguished themselves in the opposition. These measures only served to unite the settlers, and render them more resolute, and the controversy was continued without any abatement till the war commenced between Great Britain and her colonies, which, probably, prevented the parties from proceeding to open hostilities.

The internal condition of Vermont was still unsettled. She remained without any regularly organized government, controlled by the arbitrary measures of her Council of Safety. In January, 1776, they forwarded a petition to Congress, setting forth their disagreeable situation and embarrassments. In answer to this petition, Congress only recommended that they should continue peaceably under the government of New-York till the contest with Great Britain should be ended. With this resolution of Congress, some of the people were disposed to comply, others preferred a union with New-Hampshire, but the more resolute were determined upon establishing a government for themselves. To ascertain the public sentiment upon this subject, a convention of delegates from the several towns was called, which met at Dorset, July 24, 1776, and adjourned to the 25th of September following, when it again met at the same place. At this convention it was determined not to unite either with New-York or New-Hampshire, but to form an association for their common defence and welfare. In January, 1777, a general convention of delegates from the towns on both sides of the Green Mountains met at Westminster, and on the 16th day of this month formally declared the tract of country, usually denominated the New-Hampshire grants, a free and independent state by the name of Vermont. The first constitution of Vermont was established July 2, 1777, by a convention met at Windsor, and at the same time, a Council of Safety* appointed to act until the organization of the government, which took place on the 13th of March, 1778.

At the first meeting of the Vermont Assembly, application was made by 16 towns, in New-Hampshire, to be admitted to a union with Vermont, and at the next meeting of the Assembly, which took place in June following, a vote was carried in favour of the union. These measures being likely to produce a serious controversy with the government of New-Hampshire, at their session in February, 1779, the Assembly found it expedient to dissolve the union. New-York still claimed jurisdiction over the territory of Vermont, and the same claim was now again set up by New-Hampshire; and while Vermont was petitioning Congress to be admttted into the union, both these states were enforcing that body to a consideration of their respective claims, and the British were, at the same time, endeavouring to persuade the Vermonters from joining the confederacy, and to induce them to place themselves under the royal protection. But Vermont paid very little attention to these transactions, being now determined to be independent in the management of her internal affairs.

The people of Vermont have ever manifested a determined opposition to tyranny and oppression, and evinced an unshaken attachment to the cause of freedom and the rights of men. The news of the commencement of hostilities at Lexington, on the 19th of April, 1775, had no sooner reached this part of the country than the Green Mountain Boys† were in arms under the command of Col. E. Allen. At the head of these Allen surprised and took the British fort at

Ticonderoga, on the 10th of May, 1775, without the loss of a man. The same day a party, under the command of Col. Seth Warner, took Crown Point, and another party surprised and took Skeensborough. In the forts they found more than 200 pieces of cannon, howitzers, and a large quantity of ammunition and military stores. These events, together with the capture of an armed sloop in the harbour of St. Johns, secured to the Americans the complete command of lake Champlain. During the whole revolutionary war, the Vermonters acted, in proportion to their numbers, a very conspicuous and distinguished part. Allen was taken prisoner on the 25th of September, in making a rash attempt upon Montreal, loaded with irons, and sent to England. On the 31st of October, Col. Warner, with 300 Green Mountain Boys, attacked and defeated Gen. Carlton, in an attempt to cross the St. Lawrence, at the head of 800 Canadians and regulars. Carleton was obliged to retreat with precipitation to Montreal, and with the loss of a great number of his men. Many of the Green Mountain Boys served during the two campaigns in Canada, and signalized themselves, in several important engagements. On the 16th of August, 1777, in conjunction with the New-Hampshire militia, under the command of Gen. Stark and Col. Warner, they fought and completely defeated a detachment of British troops at Bennington, under the command of Col. Baum. In its consequences, 'Bennington Battle' may be regarded as one of the most important engagements during the revolutionary war. The continental army was retreating before the victorious Burgoyne, and the stoutest hearts among the Americans were beginning to despond. But this event infused new hope and new courage into the American bosom. The people immediately revived from the paralysis into which they had been thrown by a succession of defeats, and hastened to the standard of Gen. Gates, who was now in a condition to dispute the progress of the British army, and to whom on the 17th of October, the proud

Burgoyne was willing to surrender his sword and the remnant of his 10,000 invincibles.

After the termination of the war with Great Britain in 1783, the internal affairs of the state being in a prosperous condition, Vermont felt but little solicitude about an admission into the union. They chose rather to wait until they should ascertain what was likely to be the future policy of the federal government. The controversy with New-York was still continued, but the parties were becoming more disposed to a reconciliation. In 1786, Vermont revised her constitution and form of government, and in 1790, the the differences with New-York were amicably adjusted. It was mutually agreed that Vermont should pay to the treasury of New-York the sum of $30,000, in the consideration of which New-York should relinquish all claim to the territory comprehended within the present limits of Vermont. Early the next year, a convention was called to consider the expediency of joining the federal union. The convention met at Bennington, on the 6th of January, and, on the question being taken, a majority was in favor of a union. The Vermont Assembly met at the same place, on the 10th, and on the 18th the Hon. Nathaniel Chipman and Lewis R. Morris, Esq. were appointed commissioners to repair to Congress, to negociate concerning their admission; and on the 18th of February, 1791, Vermont was formally admitted into the union on the same footing with the other states, without a dissenting vote. The constitution of the state was again revised by the Council of Censors, in 1792, and adopted in its present form (with the exception of the article relative to the qualification of voters, which was altered by the late Convention) by a convention holden at Windsor, on the 4th of July, 1793.

The most effectual method of destroying Wasps is to destroy their nests. When I see them attacking fruit, or entering the bee-hives, I mark the direction in which they fly away, and follow them out of the garden till I find their nest. I then mark it, return about ten o'clock at night with a spade and a pot of water, and work up the nest and its inhabitants into a puddle.

EXPLANATION OF TERMS, CHARAC[illegible], &C. IN THE CALENDAR PAGE.

Circumcision is a feast in comm[illegible]moration of [illegible] Savior's circumcision, January 1. Epiphany is a f[illegible]st celebrated the 12th day after Chris[illegible], because on that day Christ was manifested to th[illegible] Gentiles by a blazing star. Septuagesima is the 3d Sunday before Lent.

FARMER'S CALENDAR.

Now the clouds sift down snow;
North winds now relentless blow,
The weather grows severe;
Before the sleigh the horses bound,
The cracking whip, the bells resound,
To welcome in the Year.

The annual circuit is again completed. Yes, though we sleep, our chariot does not abate its accustomed speed. Let us then awake! be up and doing! and not have it said, when we are called to another world, that we have been no more useful in this than lifeless statues. Mankind were not created for idleness. Diligence and activity are the very essence of life and happiness.

Look well to your barns; see that your hay is not wasted by trusting too much to boys. Fair words butter no parsnips.

Capt. Wisely says it is a fine thing to get up a supply of wood for summer, while the sledding is good, in order to keep the women in good humor. Let us make the trial. No pains should be spared to cultivate peace at our fire-sides.

HARD TIMES. All cry out, hard times. Every body in debt and nothing to pay with. Well then, we must be indulgent to one another, as we must all stand in need of indulgence. Now is the time to reform—to study economy—curtail expenses—simplify Purification of the Virgin Mary. Feb. 2d was observed, because the 40 days of [illegible]ification, according to the law of Moses, after the birth [illegible] Christ, expired on this day. The forty days before Easter, are called Lent. Ash Wednesday is the first day of Lent, so called, because the church fasted in sackcloth, with ashes on their heads, on that day.

The drifting winds triumphant roar,
Block up the roads, alas!
The winds abate. Turn out, turn out!
Bestir your stumps, you lazy lout,
And let the trav'ller pass.

"Who hath woe? who hath sorrow? who hath contentions?" who hath a bloody nose and red eyes? They that frequent the tavern. Who hath poverty, with a numerous family of ragged and starving children? He that is often seen reeling home with a bottle of rum. Let the profession of a man be what it may, he has not a moment of time to lose during his whole life. Yet how many there are, who pass whole days, and even weeks, at this season, as dormant as the oyster.

Come, Mr. Somnus, rouse up! If the inclemency of the weather will not permit you to be out a door, you may employ your time to advantage in reading to your family. See that all things are kept neat and in order at the barn. King Solomon says, that "He that is slothful in his work, is brother to him that is a great waster."

Easter Sunday is the great festival of our Savior's resurrection, and determines the times of all the moveable feasts. It is held on the Sunday of, or next after, the full moon, next after the 21st of March.

Right ascension of a planet is its distance from the beginning of Aries, reckoned on the equator to the east, according to the order of the signs.

Aphelion is that point of a planet's orbit which is at the greatest distance from the sun. Nodes are the two points where the orbit of a planet seems to intersect the ecliptic. That where the planet appears to ascend from the south to the north side of the ecliptic, is called the ascending node; the opposite point, where the planet appears to descend from the north to the south, is called the descending node.

Now the fields, loaded with the bounties of nature, show us that we have not labored in vain. The orchards bend with fruit, and the meadows and hill tops are crowned with ripening corn.

Wonderful have been the changes of fashion this season; but it requires an abler connoisseur than myself to see wherein they are altered for the better.

If you would be rich, retrench a little from the expense of maintaining your bad habits, use less rum and tobacco, and clothe yourself with domestic manufactures.

There are many more matters that call for reformation; but we will wait to see how these hints are regarded before we name any more.

P. S. We have half a mind to recommend retrenchment to long sermons; but are almost afraid to say a word about it. Perhaps it is better to let sermonizers jog on in their old way.—Thomaston Register.

The insect tribes with gilded wing,
Resign their cheerful breath;
The leaves by pinching frost embrown'd,
With carpets spread the forest ground,
And nature sinks in death.

Look with an eye of charity on your indigent neighbor. Deride him not because he is poor. We know not how soon we may be brought to his low estate. Riches may take to themselves wings, and fly away. Now, in my opinion, he who scoffs at poverty and misfortune, deserves not the name of human. Harvest your Indian corn, and see it does not spoil in the heap before it is husked.

It is said, that "if the best man's faults were written in his forehead, he would pull his hat over his eyes."

Gather in your winter apples, lest they be injured by the frost. Dig potatoes.

"He who flies to a knavish lawyer for succour, as the sheep to the bushes in a storm, must expect to leave a good part of his fleece behind him."

When prosperous times come to the poor, they grow rich rapidly, because of their habits—when bad times come to the rich, they grow poor rapidly, because of their habits. By habits are meant those of application, expense, and respect to small earnings and savings. Habits, then, should not be much changed on account of prosperity. This is important to the man, and a blessing as an example. Luxuries and ornaments should not be considered necessaries, extravagance the basis of respect, nor idleness happiness.

Touching the heart as summer wind,
Wakes the Æolian's wizard string;
And lighting on the weary mind,
With dreams from Memory's loaded wing.

FARMER'S CALENDAR.

Your gran'ries full, your barns o'erflow,
The bounties that the fields bestow
The happy farm-house throng;
Then sound aloud your Maker's praise,
Who thus your every toil repays,
In a thanksgiving song.

Be very circumspect in the selection of your schoolmaster. Every mushroom, now a days, who is able to read in the Spelling Book, and has blundered through the ground rules of arithmetic, sets up for a pedagogue, thinking it easier to doze in a school house, roast his shins, and strut about with an old watch in his pocket, than to use the axe or flail. "He asks only six dollars a month," says one, "and our children are mostly small; I believe he will answer this winter."

But remember it is easier to learn three things than to unlearn one.

Secure your garden vegetables in your cellars, and your cellars against frost. Neighbor Careful is now prepared for winter. His carts, ploughs, harrows and hoes, are all safely under shelter, and his sleighs and sleds are put in order for winter. This man is master of his business, and drives it before him, whereas I could name some, whose business drives them, and presses hard upon their backs.

Riches are the instruments of good and evil, according to the disposition of the possessor. A good fortune is an edged tool, which a hundred may get for one that knows how to use it. Humanity, good nature, magnanimity, and a sense of honor, should be the qualifications of the rich; humility and patience, industry and temperance, those of the poor.

NOVEMBER hath 30 days—1830.

And light the fields of the past again,
And bring back thoughts of perished love
To shine like stars on her magic chain.

Advent Sundays are the four Sundays before Christmas. This is a time appointed by the Church as a preparation for the approaching festival of our Savior's nativity.

Christmas is a festival on the 25th, held in commemoration of the birth of Christ.

FARMER'S CALENDAR.

Blust'ring winter comes again,
Dreary, comes to close the scene;
The weather grows severe;
Now pay your debts—receive your due,
To friends be constant, kind and true,
And peace shall close the year.

Winter is again coming upon us, prepared or not.

Kill your hogs for home use, and be about smoking your hams.

Interfere not with the regulations of your schoolmaster. If Billy has received a severe drubbing, ascertain whether he deserved it before you justify him and call the master a scoundrel. And if you think that he did not deserve it, you had better conceal it from him, and have a private but friendly interview with the master on the subject. His task at best is but a scene of care and anxiety.

But with the year I must close my observations, by wishing you peace of mind and domestic tranquility; full barns and granaries; fat beef and pork; good fires without smoky rooms; sleighrides without turning over; a full purse, with a liberal hand and a generous heart; peaceable neighbors and good company; good books and much pleasure,—as for myself, I wish an increased demand, and good pay, for my Register.

Wealth is apt to betray a man into arrogance, pride and luxury; let us therefore ever remember, it is a talent given us of God; and as we have nothing but what we receive from him, we should imitate his love to us, by being always ready and willing to communicate his gifts to others.

Like the wandering dove she floats away
To hover that ever in sunshine lay,
Bringing the blossoms that there were dear,
And bearing from the bosom with many a tear."

Vermont.

SITUATION, BOUNDARIES AND EXTENT.

THE state of Vermont is situated between 42 degrees and 44 minutes, and 45 degrees north latitude; and between one degree 43 minutes, and 3 degrees 36 minutes of east longitude from Philadelphia. It is bounded on the east by the west line of Connecticut river, which separates it from New-Hampshire; on the south by Massachusetts; on the north by the 45th degree of north latitude, which separates it from Lower Canada; and on the west by the state of New-York; from which it is separated by the west line of the towns of Pownal, Bennington, Shaftsbury, Arlington, Sandgate, Rupert, Pawlet, Wells, and Poultney, and by the middle of the deepest channel of Poultney river, East Bay, and Lake Champlain. Its mean width is 65 miles, and mean length 157 1-2 miles, and contains 10,237 1-2 square miles, or 6,552,000 acres.

DIVISION.

The first division of the territory of Vermont into counties, took place in 1765, while the government of New-York claimed jurisdiction over it. The southwestern parts were then annexed to the county of Albany, and the northwestern parts were erected into a county by the name of Charlotte. Cumberland county was formed of the southeastern parts, and Gloucester county of the northeastern. The Green Mountains form the only natural division. These mountains extend quite through the state from south to north, and, following the western range, divide it very nearly into two equal parts.

The state of Vermont is now divided into 13 counties, which are subdivided into 245 townships and 16 gores. The townships are generally about six miles square; the gores are much smaller. The names of the counties and shire towns, and the number of towns nd gores in each county, in 1824, are exhibited in the ollowing

GOVERNMENT.

The present Constitution of Vermont was adopted by the Convention holden at Windsor, July 4, 1793. According to which, the legislative powers are vested in a house of representatives, chosen annually by the freemen of each organized town, on the first Tuesday of September, of such persons as shall have resided in the state two years.

The Executive Powers are vested in the Supreme Executive Council, which consists of a Governor, Lieutenant Governor, and twelve persons chosen by the freemen of the state, at their meeting holden in each town, on the first Tuesday of September annually. In addition to the usual executive powers, the Governor and Council have power to revise and propose amendments to the laws passed by the house of representatives; and if the amendments are not concurred in by the house, to suspend their passing until the next session of the legislature.

The House of Representatives has power, in conjunction with the Governor and Council, to elect, annually, Judges of the Supreme, County and Probate Courts, Sheriffs, Justices of the peace, State's Attornies, and Directors of the State Bank, and in case of vacancy, Major Generals and Brigadier Generals.

The annual session of the Legislature is at Montpelier, on the second Thursday of October.

JUDICIARY OF THE UNITED STATES.

The judicial power in the United States is vested in one Supreme Court; and in such inferior courts as congress from time to time may establish. The present judicial establishment of the U. States consists of a Supteme Court, of twenty-eight District Courts, and seven Circuit Courts, which are thus organized; the Supreme Court is composed of one Chief Justice and six Associate Justices, who hold a Court in the City of Washington annually; besides which, each of these Justices attends in a certain Circuit, comprising two or more districts, appropriated to each, and together with the Judge of the District, compose a Circuit Court, which is holden in each District of the Circuit. The District Courts are held, respectively, by the District Judge alone. Appeals are allowed from the District to the Circuit Courts, and from the Circuit to the Supreme Court; and, in some cases, where the inconvenience of attending the court by a justice of the Supreme Court is very great, the District Courts are invested with Circuit Court powers.

Since that time, societies have been formed in ten or twelve of the United States. The Maine Society has been very efficient. Drs. Appleton and Payson were warmly engaged in this cause. In May 1828, the American Peace Society was formed in New York. It publishes an interesting periodical, entitled "Harbinger of Peace," edited by Wm. Ladd, Esq. Sec. of the Society.

MILITIA OF VERMONT.

The militia of the state consists of all the able bodied males, with a few exceptions made by law, between the age of 18 and 45 years. Each soldier is required to keep himself constantly provided with such arms and equipments, as are necessary for actual service, and, by so doing, his poll is exempted from taxation. The whole militia is, at present, divided into four divisions, 10 brigades and 35 regiments, with from eight to 12 companies in each. Belonging to most of the regiments are also one company of cavalry, one of artillery and one of light infantry, and in many cases more than one of each. The governor is captain general and commander in chief, and with the advice of the council is to arrange the whole militia into divisions, brigades, &c. and may from time to time, make such alterations as he shall see fit. Each division is commanded by a major general, with a division inspector, a division quarter master and two aids; each brigade by a brigadier general, with a brigade inspector, brigade quarter master, and one aid; each regiment by a colonel, lieutenant colonel and major, with the customary staff; and each company by a captain, lieutenant and ensign, with the customary non-commissioned officers. The major generals and brigadier generals are appointed by the legislature. The field officers are chosen by the commissioned officers of their respective regiments, and the several companies elect their own officers. The whole militia of the state amounts to about 25,000.

POPULATION.

There have been but four complete enumerations of the inhabitants of this state since the organization of its government, the first of which was in 1791. In 1771, there was a census of the two counties of Cumberland and Gloucester, which then comprehended all the territory of Vermont between the Green Mountains and the Connecticut river. This census gave a population, in those two counties, of 3947, and the population of the whole state was at that time estimated at about 7000. The results of the four subsequent enumerations are exhibited in the following

CHEAP ANTIDOTE.

There is not a house in the country that does not contain a remedy for poisoning, if instantly administered. It is nothing more than two tea-spoonsfull of made mustard, mixed in warm water. It acts as an instantaneous emetic. Making this simple antidote known may be the means of saving many a fellow creature from an untimely death.

If you are determined to be miserable, be a drunkard.

FARMER'S CALENDAR.

The stream of time flows swift along—
A stream unceasing and so strong
That nought its power withstands;
It bears along in its career
The days and months and varied year,
And works of human hands.

Fellow Citizens—I know very well that it is one thing to preach and another thing to practice—that it is one thing to teach by precept and quite another thing to teach by example; or in other words it is much easier to give good advice than to follow it. But the difficulty of following good advice is not a sufficient reason for neglecting to give it; I shall therefore continue to advise, and if the good people see fit to follow my advice—well—if not, I shall clear my own skirts, and they must bear the consequences upon their own shoulders. Advice, in order to be effectual, must be pungent, and in order to be pungent it must be directed to particular cases, and these cases must be brought home to individuals. General advice is directed to every body, and what is every body's business is no body's, and therefore no body regards it. If I tell Corporal Sloven that he is a slovenly man because he suffers his cattle and sheep to lie together on the barn floor and eat out of the hay-mow and waste twice as much hay as they eat, Corporal Sloven knows whom I mean, and although he may be offended at me for exposing him, he will profit by the exposition, because he knows all eyes are now turned upon him, and Corporal S. is not wholly destitute of pride.

A TRUE SKETCH.

The depopulating pestilence that walketh at noonday, the carnage of cruel and devastating war, can scarcely exhibit their victims in more terrible array, than exterminating drunkenness. I have seen a promising family spring from the parent trunk, and stretching abroad its populous limb like a flowering tree, covered with a green and healthy foliage. I have seen

Ah! why, unfeeling Winter! why
Still flags thy torpid wing?
Fly melancholy season, fly,
And leave the year to Spring.

FARMER'S CALENDAR.

Time bids the snows descend and spread
A carpet o'er the mountain's head,
And in the vale below;
Time bids the winds arise and bear
On pinions of the moving air
The dancing flakes of snow.

In looking round upon the motely crew, which make up the world of mankind, what a vast multitude are recognized by the sir-name Idler. Among the most prominent and best known of this name, is Tipling Idler. This man's conduct demonstrates that rum is the supreme object of his regard,—that he loves it better than his friends, or his wife, or his children, and that he is ready to abandon all these, and even make them wretched, to obtain it,—yea, better than his own life, for we see him lay down his life for rum. But several respectable families have formed a resolution that they will henceforth have no farther intercourse with this family of Idlers but would use their influence to banish them from all good society.

This is a short month and a blustering one into the bargain, yet notwithstanding this, you have something to do. All things require care, and besides this your minds require culture and you little think how fast time slips away. This littte month may vanish before you are aware of it.

Tho' Boreas may bluster and heap up the snows,
And Jack Frost pinch your ears, your fingers & toes,
Yet time trudges on as he trudged on of old,
Nor heeds our complaints, nor the north wind nor cold.

Then rouse up; and if your hand findeth nought to do, the mind hath labor to perform, and what that findeth to do let it do with its might.

FARMER'S CALENDAR.

Time bids the sun return and bring
His genial aid to ope the spring,
And burst the icy bands;
The mountain snows dissolve and flow
Along the deluged vales below,
And fertilize the lands.

See that your cattle and horses are not permitted to range upon your pasture and mowing lands while they are soft and miry. This practice is a sure indication of an unthrifty, slovenly farmer. And these are not the only signs indicative of a poor farmer, which manifest themselves. He neglects to remove the earth and dung from the sils of his buildings, till the sils become rotten, and then it costs him twenty dollars for repairs which one dollar's worth of work would have saved, if it had been performed in leisure time ten years before. He sows and plants his lands till they are exhausted before he thinks of manuring. He keeps more stock than he can keep well, and consequently his cattle and sheep are carried off by murrain and other distempers, and those which survive the winter are weak and unactive and do not thrive during the summer. But the good farmer is the reverse of all this. He keeps pace with his business and sees that every thing is done in season—yea, more than this—he is continually providing for the future. At this season when the weather is unsuitable for the making of sugar, he is employed in putting his tools in order for the performance of his spring's work. His carts, ploughs, harrows, hoes and shovels are all carefully examined, and those, which need it, thoroughly repaired; and he even now looks forward to the season of hay-making and is not unmindful of the condition of his scythes, rakes and pitch-forks.

FARMER'S CALENDAR.

Time bids the sun increase his fire—
Time bids the swol'n streams retire
Within their wonted bounds;
Time bids the earth put on her green
And then enlivens all the scene
With sweet and cheerful sounds.

Now, farmer, shall I exhort you to quicken your activity? Shall I tell you to stir your stumps—to be up and doing? All creation is addressing this exhortation to you. The sky over your head—the ground under your feet—the fields and gardens on every hand say unto you now is the accepted time! and as you now sow so shall you hereafter also reap. If you sow spatingly you shall reap sparingly. If you cast the seed upon the ground without putting the ground in a proper condition to receive it, you sow to the wind and in the time of harvest you shall reap chaff. But cast good seed in suitable quantities, upon good ground which is well prepared and it shall spring up and grow and bring forth fifty, yea, perhaps a hundred fold; and then at the harvest shall ye gather in the ear and the full corn in the ear and ye shall then be filled with food and gladness.

Neglect not the making and planting of your gardens. A very small piece of ground, which is well husbanded will do very much towards supporting a family. And if you cannot bring yourself to do as the old saying would have you, and work in the garden when it rains so hard that you cannot work out doors, still there will be many half hours in every week which may be profitably spent in the garden without interfering with other business and which would otherwise probably be spent to no purpose. A word—a hint will effect more upon the man of understanding than a kick upon a fool.

board. I, too, pledged them in the social wine cup and rejoiced with them around the hospitable hearth: and expatiated with delight upon the eventful future:

The stars that graced thy splendid night
Are lost in warmer rays;
The sun rejoicing in his might
Unrolls celestial days.

FARMER'S CALENDAR.

Time calls a new creation forth—
See all things bursting into birth,
Or rising from the dead;
First he sends down the gentle showers;
Then scatters round the lovely flowers
Upon the verdant mead.

"Gather up the fragments that nothing may be lost" was a family order given after a plentiful meal, by one who could instantly command a supply of bread. The power of providence is exercised with the same wise economy as the power of miracles. Neither of them is prostituted to the gratification of luxury, or the encouragement of negligence and laziness. In the divine works there is no profuseness and there ought to be none in ours. Providence is bountiful, but not wasteful; its blessings are bestowed freely but not lavishly. We are to receive them thankfully and use them frugally; not lose them by carelessness, nor squander them away by extravagance. The man who gathers up what heaven gives and who suffers nothing to be lost will always have a supply. He who receives not what is offered, or preserves not what is cast into his hands will always be in want. But, my friend, think not that aught will be bestowed upon you without your own endeavours. You must ask in order to receive—you must seek in order to find—you must sow in order to reap. And remember too that as ye sow, so shall ye also reap. It costs nearly as much to raise a poor crop as a good one—the same tax—the same fencing—the same quantity of seed—nearly the same quantity of tillage—the same labor in threshing—then why not manure your lands, add a little to the tillage and have great crops?

Time bids the songsters cheer the grove,
With notes of melody and love—
And when their mates they've chose
He bids them lay aside their song,
To hatch their brood and rear their young,
And watch their soft repose.

I have already given you a few of the signs of a poor farmer. It may not be amiss to increase the list since there is an abundance of materials. A slovenly farmer may be known by his inattention to small things as well as great. The shoes of his children are spoiled for the want of strings to tie them, or a little tallow to grease them. His gate hinge comes off for the want of a nail and the gate is destroyed for the want of a hinge, and his garden is destroyed for the want of a gate; aad all this loss is occasioned by not timely driving and clinching a single nail. Nothing is in order. He has a place for nothing and nothing is in its place. If he wants a gimlet, a chissel, or a hammer, he hunts up chamber, runs out to the barn, then to the corn house, searches the cupboards, and lastly when he has spent more time in the search than it would have taken to do the job, he finds it down cellar. He keeps no stock of small things if a button or a bail to a pail gives way, or a key to a yoke, or a pin to a sled, or a helve to an axe, or even a tooth to a rake, he has none to replace them. These are a few more of the signs of a poor farmer. See then, dear friend, that they are not applicable to yourself. Despise not the day of small things. Remember that large streams flow from little fountains and that the neglect of small things will bring great affairs to ruin.

man sighed as his suffused eye dwelt upon the then unoccupied seat. But joy yet came to his relief, and he was happy. The lambs are leaping o'er the green ;
No hoar frost in the dawn is seen ;
But every heart and every grove
Thrills with the ecstacies of love.

Time in his course moves all things on,
Bids days approach and bids them gone,
Nor heeds what mortals say;
But on his current swift and strong
He bears the days and months along
And wafts us all away.

Well, now neighbor Haymaker, if you have kept pace with your business, every thing is in complete readiness to commence your haying. But I have two cautions to give—Beware of cold water and hot rum. The one may kill by excessive friendship and the other by its implacable enmity. Would you, friend, if the outside of your dwellings were exposed, or actually on fire, endeavor to extinguish them and preserve your buildings by scattering flames within? That course would imply no greater folly than to pour down our throats ardent spirits, that liquid fire, to counteract the fervor produced in our frame by that flood of solar fire which is now descending upon us. If your hay is not perfectly well made before it goes into your barn be not sparing of salt. Scatter it upon your hay freely and it will not be lost, nor your hay spoiled, nor will you have the trouble of salting your cattle while feeding upon it. When it so rains that you cannot work out-a-door you, who neglect to do it at other times, may take care of your gardens. What needs doing better be done at a bad time than not to be done at all. But remember that there is a time and a season for all things, and that as far as possible every thing should be done in its season. Leave till to-morrow that which should be done to day and the business of the morrow will crowd upon next day and so on ad infinitum. Remember that your garden wants looking to now and then. How much better it is to save our own garden seeds than to pay a dollar or two every year to the Quakers for saving them for us!

Late winter reigned on every hand;
Then spring unlock'd his icy hand,
And bade the earth rejoice;
The earth revived, and then at length
The summer came in all his strength—
Now lifts his sultry voice.

When I see, as is not unfrequently the case, a stout hearty man begging from house to house, a scanty pittance for a family of tattered starving children, thinks I to myself, man, you have a hard row to hoe. You had much better ask alms of mother earth. She will listen to the voice of thy supplications, and she, if she does not fully reward your attentions, will not lo a you with curses nor break your bones with kicks. And he must be a being, sui generis, who does not find it easier, as well as more profitable, to labor than to beg.

Drive your harvesting and not let your grain return again into the earth. Neither let it sprout in the field nor heat inthe stock, nor be destroyed by vermin. I have told you before, and the wise king Solomon has told you that he who is slothful in his business is brother to him who is a great waster. But what signifies admonitions and exhortations if they pass by those for whom they are intended like the idle winds, wholly unregarded. But we are encouraged by such promises as this—Be ye not weary in well doing, for in due time ye shall reap if you faint not—i. e. ye shall, sooner or later see your admonitions heeded and your efforts crowned with success.

swered, where? His heart broke—for they were not. Could not Heaven have spared his gray hairs this affliction? Alas! the demon of drunkenness had been there. They had fallen victims of his spell. And one short month sufficed to cast the veil of oblivion over the old man's sorrow and the young one's shame. They are all dead.

But time! invidious time moves on!
The sultry summer now is gone,
And Autumn shows his front;
But every season brings along
Its joys and sorrows, sigh and song,
Its plenty and its want.

Summer has again wasted his strength—vegitation has lost its vigour, and the sallow leaf and the ripening fruit proclaim that the waning of the year has already commenced. See how the orchards are bending beneath their load, while the ground beneath them is literally strewed with the fallen fruit, which is mellowing in the sun. Shall I again tell you to secure your seeds for planting another year? Yea; for I find line upon line and precept upon precept to be absolutely necessary in these degenerate times. Let your seeds be well dried, if on the stalk, the better, and then lay them away in a dry place secure from the vermin.—'T is true the expense of garden seeds is but a little, but it is well to remember, that and that you must be careful and particular, if it is your ambition to be in a state to manage imporant matters.

Next to Xantippies, above all bipeds, I sincerely hate busybodies who go gabbleing and tattleing about telling every thing they see, hear or imagine. If it is true that 'one scabbed sheep mars the whole flock,' it is no less true that one busibody is sure to keep the whole neighborhood in a continual jargon. How much better it is to mind our own business and let other folks alone, than to be continually in fault ourselves by publishing the faults of others.

FARMER'S CALENDAR.

And now the Autumn months are here,
Which bear along the changing year;—
October yields his treasures up,
And plenty with a liberal hand
Spreads joy and gladness o'er the land,
And fills the foaming cup.

Look now at the forests! See how the leaves wither, and fade, and fall to the ground. How great the contrast between the russet with which the forests are now clad and their full, deep and lovely green of summer! But the blossoms and leaves are not the only objects which fade, and wither and die. A like fate awaits every sublunary object. Where now is that beauty, who, a few years since, delighted the eyes and captivated the hearts of her beholders! Perhaps she is mouldering in yonder church-yard. If not, the youthful plumpness and the roseat tint, have long since been chased from her visage by the care-worn furrows of age, and her countenance is already changed by the irresistible advances of the winter of life. Secure your latter harvest in due season, and be reminded that there is a pilferer lurking around your premises and ready to snatch away every thing which is left within his reach. He has been known to steal whole fields of potatoes, and it is no uncommon thing, at this late season of the year, to find him making depradations upon our gardens, especially if we have been negligent and gotten a little behind our business. If you would have your garden sauce safe, secure it in your cellars, and then secure your cellars from frost, for he is the noted pilferer. Make up your cider, bung it up in clean strong casks, without giving it vent, and keep it as cool as you possibly can, without suffering it to freeze. Kept in this way you will have pleasant cider in the spring; but without this precaution, the acetous fermentation will soon change it to vinegar.

FARMER'S CALENDAR.

How changed the scene! with brown and red
The forests' dress is inter-spread;
And rustling in the gale,
The leaves up borne upon the breeze
To distant moorings sail.

As this is a trifling age, trifles are become the most valued commodities. The ancient and modern classics are laid aside and people now read none but trifling authors, and pursue none but trifling amusements, and contend for none but trifling fashions and opinions. A trifling fellow is preferred to the man of real worth, and a trifling woman is more admired than she who can think. And as if there were not real trifles enough in the world, the people now make trifles of the most serious and valuable things, for they trifle away their time, their health, their money, and their reputation. Honesty has become a trifle, honor a trifle, sincerity a trifle, conscience a trifle, and religion the greatest trifle of all. And I can but fear, although I regret to say it, that my own weighty admonitions and sage instructions are regarded as trifles. But it is some consolation to know, that such treatment is, in these trifling times, the most conclusive proof of their intrinsic excellence and importance. Look ye, friend, to the windward! It will not be a trifling thing to have winter come upon you, while you are unprepared. Tattered shoes and stockings—thin and ragged clothing—a shattered and open house—a poor fire and scanty bed clothes, are not the veriest trifles in the world in cold winter weather.

A word to the wise,
Gives sight to his eyes,
But the fool will despise.
And his trifles still prize.

fresh boiling water each time. The linen is then to be removed and the part thus treated to be washed with clean cold water.

But no: the leaves from fading trees,
With rustling noise complain,
While from the north the Boreas breeze,
Drives fiercely o'er the plain.

FARMER'S CALENDAR.

And now December cold and drear,
Comes on to close the changing year,
And bid it hence retire:
Then, friend, thy house in order set,
Collect your due, pay every debt—
And then enjoy your fire.

But the car of time is bringing us to the verge of another year, and what now remains to be said must be shortly said, and what remains to be done must be quickly done. And to you, friends, whose labors during the year, have been crowned with abundance, lift your hearts in gratitude to the Disposer of events, and with a tribute of thanksgiving and praise bow down before the Lord, thy Maker; and with that beneficence with which he has regarded you, look round upon the poor and destitute, and double thy own blessings by giving a portion of what thou hast so freely received—yea, by so doing thy blessings will be more than doubled, in as much as it is more blessed to give than to receive. See that your schools are furnished with good teachers, with good and comfortable school rooms, and with the necessary apparatus and all the conveniences for facilitating the communication and acquisition of knowledge. Better far to leave thy children poor and well educated, than to leave them rich, in worldly stores and poor in intellectual treasures. Which is the nobler part of our persons, body or mind? But, courteous reader, we are now arrived at the brink of the year, and standing upon it, and wishing you much profit from the past, and much happiness in the time to come—wishing you abundant success in all your laudable pursuits, and an exemption from all the avoidable ills of this present life, and immortal bliss in the life which is to come—I bid you an affectionate—Farewell.

In washing jewelry, or any thing ornamented with gold, it is a great improvement to pour a few drops of sal-volatile into the suds prepared for that purpose.

And winter comes, and nature dies,
But dies to live again;
For Spring will come—the flowers will rise
Upon the snow clad plain.

JUDICIARY OF THE UNITED STATES.

The judicial power in the United States is vested in one Supreme Court, and in such inferior courts as Congress from time to time may establish. The present judicial establishment of the United States consists of a Supreme Court, of 28 District Courts, and seven Circuit Courts, which are thus organized; the Supreme Court is composed of one Chief Justice and six Associate Justices, who hold a court in the city of Washington annually; besides which, each of these Justices attends in a certain circuit, comprising two or more districts, appropriated to each, and together with the Judge of the District, compose a circuit court, which is holden in each district of the circuit. The district courts are held, respectively, by the district Judge alone. Appeals are allowed from the district to the Circuit Courts, and from the Circuit to the Supreme Court; and, in some cases, where the inconvenience of attending the court by a justice of the Supreme Court is very great, the District Courts are invested with Circuit Court powers.

MILITIA OF VERMONT.

The Militia of the state consists of all the able bodied males, with a few exceptions made by law, between the age of 18 and 45 years. Each soldier is required to keep himself constantly provided with such arms and equipments, as are necessary for actual service, and, by so doing, his poll is exempted from taxation. The whole militia is, at present, divided into four divisions, 10 brigades and 35 regiments, with from eight to 12 companies in each. Belonging to most of the regiments is also one company of cavalry, one of artillery and one of light infantry, and in many cases more than one of each. The Governor is captain general and commander in chief, and with the advice of the council is to arrange the whole militia into divisions, brigades, &c. and may, from time to time, make such alterations as he shall see fit. Each division is commanded by a major general, with a division inspector, a division quarter master, and two aids; each brigade by a brigadier general, with a brigade inspector, brigade quarter master, and one aid; each regiment by a colonel, lieutenant colonel and major, with the customary staff; and each company by a captain, lieutenant and ensign, with the customary non-commissioned officers. The major generals and brigadier generals are appointed by the legislature. The field officers are chosen by the commissioned officers of their respective regiments and the several companies elect their own officers. The whole militia of the state amounts to about 25,000.

POPULATION.

There have been but four complete enumerations of the inhabitants of this state since the organization of its government, the first of which was in 1791. In 1771, there was a census of the two counties of Cumberland and Gloucester, which then comprehended all the territory of Vermont between the Green Mountains and the Connecticut river. This census gave a population, in those two counties, of 3947, and the population of the whole state was at that time estimated at about 7000. The results of the subsequent enumerations are exhibited in the following

AN ACT

IN RELATION TO IMPRISONMENT FOR DEBT.

SEC. 1. It is hereby enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Vermont, That hereafter, when any final judgment shall be rendered by any supreme or county court, or justice of the peace, on any contract made or entered into, after the first day of January next, the debtor may appear before such court during the same term, in which such judgment is rendered, or before such justice, within two hours, after the rendition of such judgment by him, and submit himself to be examined on oath, by such supreme or county court, or justice, and by the creditor, his agent or attorney, touching the situation, circumstances, and property of such debtor, and if such court or justice shall be of opinion that such debter is entitled to the benefit of the oath, named in the second section of this act, the said oath shall, by said court or justice, be administered to such debtor, and a record thereof be made; and in such case, no execution shall issue on said judgment against the body of such debtor.

Sec. 2. It is hereby further enacted, That the oath to be administered to such debtors shall be in the form following, to wit:—You solemnly, sincerely and truly swear, (or affirm) without evasion, equivocation or mental reservation, that you have not any estate, real or personal, except one cow, one swine, or the meat of one swine, ten cords of fire-wood, five bushels of grain, twenty bushels of potatoes, ten sheep and one year's produce of said sheep, and forage sufficient for the keeping of your cow and sheep, through the present, or ensuing winter (as the case may be) and such suitable apparel, bedding, tools and household furniture, as may be necessary for upholding life, and such military arms and equipments, as it is your duty, by law, to furnish, in possession, remainder or reversion; to the value of twenty dollars in the whole, nor sufficient to pay the debt, damages and costs, for which judgment has been rendered against you, and that you have not, directly nor indirectly, disposed of all or any part of your estate to defeat or deceive any of your just creditors—So help you God—(or, in case of affirmation;) under the pains and penalties of perjury."

Passed Nov. 8, 1330.

NORMAN WILLIAMS, Sec. of State.

CUTTING OF GRAIN.

A writer in the New-England Farmer advises farmers to cut grain earlier than is ordinarily the practice. He says his peculiar rule by which he is governed, is to cut grain when I can nearly crush the kernel with my thumb and finger. I find by experience, that there are many peculiar advantages attending this practice of early cutting. In the first place, you get as much, or more grain, notwithstanding the shrinking of the kernel. But when made into bread, its superiority is strikingly apparent. Your loaf will increase in size and beauty, and its flavor will be manifestly superior. The superiority of the straw is another important consideration in favor of early cutting; for cattle or horses, it is vastly superior, and even for purposes of manure it is far preferable.—When grain stands late in the field, many of the stocks are crippled down, much is destroyed by vermin and birds, and immense quantities are wasted in gathering it by its scattering from the heads and sheaves. After cutting your grain at the period I propose, expose it a short time to the sun, then bind it in small sheaves, and put it very nicely into the shock. After this you need not be in haste to get it into the barn; should it stand out 20 or 30 days it will not be amiss.

FRUIT TREES.

The best method of obtaining fruit trees is as follows: Take a scion as for grafting, and at any time after the first of February, and at any time till the buds begin to grow considerably, and dip the ends of the shoot in melted pitch, or rosin and tallow, and bury it in the ground, the buds uppermost, with the body in a horizontal position, at the depth of two or three inches. Scions treated in this manner will produce fruit in five or six years.

Eclipses in 1832.

In On the first day of February the Sun eclipsed, invisible at Montpelier, ♂ 5h. 25m. evening. The Sun will be centrally eclipsed on the meridian, in the South Pacific Ocean, a little to the westward of the Society Islands.

On the 27th of July there will be a visible eclipse of the Sun:

Beginning	7h. 5m.	Apparent time.
Greatest Obscuration	7h. 47m.
End of Eclipse	8h. 41m.	Morning.

Duration, 1h. 36m. Digits eclipsed 4° 4′ on the Sun's southern limb. This eclipse will be total in the West Indies, and, what is of very rare occurrence, the duration of total darkness, where the eclipse is central on the meridian, will exceed six minutes.

Rare Phenomenon.

On the 5th day of May there will be a transit of Mercury over the disc of the sun, partly visible:

Beginning	4 13
Sun rises	4 54	Apparent
Conjunction in Long.	7 17	Time.
Mercury nearest ✱'s centre	7 33	Morning.
End of the Transit	11 54

Duration of the Transit, 6h. 51m. Visible, 6h. 10m. Mercury will enter upon the eastern side of the sun's disc, pass about 8′ northward of the sun's centre, and leave the disc at the western side. The last transit of Mercury was in 1822—the next after this year will be in 1835.

Cure for Ladies' Rheumatism.

Take a good warm Scotch shawl, and apply it immediately round the shoulders and chest; and add also, secundem artem, a stout Welch flannel petticoat, and remain at home at least long enough to put them on.

Pudding! Light Pudding!

Fresh snow from the surface, used in making a pudding, will render it equally light as eggs; two table spoonfuls are to be substituted for each egg; if this proportion is exceeded, the pudding will fall to pieces in boiling.

Farmer's Calendar.

"The cattle mourn in corners where the fence
Screens them, and seem half petrified to sleep
In unrecumbent sadness. There they wait
Their wonted fodder; not like hungry man,
Fretful if unsupplied; but silent, meek,
And patient of the slow-paced boy's delay.

Fellow-Citizens—What shall I say to you, which I have not already said, again and again? But ere this it is altogether propable that you have utterly forgotten every word of the good advice which I have hitherto given you, and would think the whole new and original should I say the same things over again.—While adulation and flattery are bid a hearty welcome and treasured up in long remembrance, exhortation and admonition pass by like the idle wind, making no impression and are never thought of more. Curious! that men should reject wholesome nutriment and endeavor to subsist on noxious vapour! Tell a man in the most friendly manner that you fear the course he is pursuing will lead him to destruction and you must look out or he will knock out your brains. But insinuate to him that he is a fine fellow, that he is far above the morbid and dastardly crew, who fear to do not only great but little wrongs, and he will, I will not say, pluck out his right eye, but bow gracefully in your behalf, assured that you will in consequence increase your flatteries four fold. But I am for plain dealing. I do not wish people to tell me that this is that, or that is this, but rather that this is this and that is that. And I am determined to deal as plainly with others as I would have them do with me, and when I see a fellow mortal going headlong down the hill of ruin,

I shall bid him to take heed,
Though he curse me for the deed.

Winter is the season for benevolence. The poor we have always among us, and they must receive sympathy and relief from those to whom the common Father has entrusted the means of beneficence.

Old Time, his steady course pursuing,
Bears some to wealth and some to ruin:
Ends some with sadness, some with cheer,
Commence a new, an untried year.

Farmer's Calendar.

"The cattle now their rustling feast enjoy,
And snatch sweet mouthfuls from the passing boy,
Who moves unseen beneath his trailing load,
Fills the tall racks and leaves a scatter'd road:
Where oft the swine from ambush warm and dry,
Bolt out, and scamper headlong to their sty,
When Giles, with well known voice already there,
Deigns them a portion of his evening care.

A lazy man is at heart a knave, nine cases out of ten, and the only reason why he does not manifest himself to the world as such is the want of resolution sufficient to act out the real sentiments of his heart.—He is a serpent stiffened with cold, whose bite is powerless, not for the want of a disposition to bite, but for the want of flexibility of muscle, and there can scarcely be a doubt but that it is a blessing to the world, since such beings must inhabit it, that so many serpentlike dispositions are rendered harmless by being encased in a tenement of torpid flesh and blood.—Friend, I would advise thee, as thou dost not covet the reputation of being a rascal. to show thyself active and diligent in thy business and in readiness to every good work. Let not the cold and ruthless winds deter thee from leaving thy comfortable fireside and going abroad on the errand of mercy. Let not the pathless snowdrifts shut up thy charity within the narrow precincts of thine own domestic circle. But rather seek than shun the abodes of wretchedness and want, and administer to the relief of body and spirit—administer warmth to the freezing, food to the hungry, consolation to the afflicted, admonition to the votaries of folly, and unsparing severity to the incorrigible evil doers.

Winter has come in its cold and harsh reality; the season of desolation and suffering, of social excitement and domestic happiness. Winter has it privations and its pains, but it has also its blessings and its pleasures; and we ought to acknowledge the one, while we feel—but not complain of—the other.

A year—whose scenes time soon reveals—
Whose destinies time quickly seals—
Nor heeds our wail—nor heeds our song,
But rolls with equal speed along.

Farmer's Calendar.

"Now winter flies!
And see the source of life and light up rise!
A heightening arch o'er southern hills he bends,
Warm on the cheek the slanting beams descends;
And gives the reeking mead a brighter hue,
And draws the modest primrose bud to view
Yet frosts succeed, and winds impetuous rush,
And hail-stones rattle through the budding bush."

When we are children we are very happy—we can lay down one toy and take up another, and thus please ourselves with variety. But increasing in folly as we increase in years we at length become so foolish that no toy will please us but a wife. And that indeed as it is a toy for life, so it is all toys in one. She is a rattle in a man's ears which he cannot throw aside. But, however, a good wife in my opinion is the greatest blessing and the most valuable possession, that heaven in this life can bestow upon man. She makes the cares and perplexities of this world sit easily upon him, and she, by sharing them with him, sweetens all the pleasures of his life. She is man's best companion in prosperity, and his only friend in adversity—She watches with the most intense carefulness over his health, and from her he receives the kindest attentions on the bed of sickness. She is his most faithful adviser in scenes of distress and difficulty—she is the best comforter in affliction and adversity—and she is the most faithful steward and prudent manager of our domestic affairs. But naturally inclining to a married state, how comes it to pass that marriage is so wonderfully out of fashion now-adays? I dare say there are hundreds of old bachelors, who would not give slumber to their eyelids till they had each found a rib, were it not for the fear of being laughed at, and this is not the only case in which young people are ashamed to do a good action, because it is not in the fashoin. A large portion of the world submit to displease themselves for the sake of pleasing a few coxcombs, and fear less to become objects of the divine wrath, than those of human ridicule.

The fierceness of the northern blast
Already now is o'er and past,
And now the south-wind comes to bring
The soft, the balmy breath of spring.

" Advancing spring profusely spreads abroad
Flowers of all hues with sweetest fragrance stored
Where ere she treads love gladdens every plain
Delight on tip toe bears her lucid train ;
Sweet hope with conscious brow before her flies,
Anticipating wealth from summer skies;
All nature feels her renovating sway,
The sheep-fed pasture and the meadow gay."

" I can do without it" is a motto which, if every one would bear in mind, would be found of almost infinite service in the world, and would save many a clever fellow from poverty, from the jail and from the gallows. Let this motto be indelibly engraved in the mind of every individual. Let the Farmer when he is tempted to send for his jug of rum, ask himself seriously if he cannot do without it. When he is advised to purchase a fine carriage, or to build him a new house or get him a sideboard and a fine Turkey carpet, let him put to himself the same interrogatory, and if his judgment answers in the affirmative, let him ask himself if embarrassments may not be expected to follow in the train of consequences. And my fair friends when you go to the shop for your rig-up, be so good as to put the above question candidly and seriously to yourselves previous to the purchase of every article which you may suppose you need. That precaution may save your husbands and fathers a deal of expense and trouble, and draw closer that chord of affection which binds you to their hearts, while a thoughtless extravagance is sure to produce an opposite effect. If people would do without what they could do without, those reverses of fortune which are now so common and so distressing would be rare occurrences.

It is not necessary, I hope to remind you that it is now time to begin your gardens and to plant your beets, carrots, onions, &c. for early use. But regulate the times of planting by the forwardness of the season, and not by the Moon. The Moon is sufficiently occupied in her own affairs, not to be a busibody in ours.

The sun mounts towards the northern skies,
And bids a new creation rise—
Bids dead new life, new vigour take,
And sleepers from their sleep awake.

Farmer's Calendar.

"Fled now the sullen murmurs of the north,
The splendid raiment of the spring comes forth,
Her universal green and the clear sky,
Delight still more and more the gazing eye;
Wide o'er the fields in rising moisture strong,
Up spring the flowers and creep the vines along."

The good farmer need not now be exhorted to diligence in his business. He is not like the lazy ox which requires to be continually pricked and goaded in order to make him move forward. A sense of duty, and the hope of reward are sufficent motives to stimulate him to action. But what shall I say to the sluggard?—To him who foldeth his arms and saith a little more sleep and a little more slumber? Why I must say that if he has disregarded all I have hitherto said, his case is truly desperate, and must be given up to his sluggardism till he gives up his sluggardly breath. Oh Idleness, how wretched are thy votaries! Thou not only conductest them to poverty and enervatest their bodies by thy palsying influence, but thou renderest their minds imbecile, and bluntest all the moral sensibilities of their nature.

How creation revives by the animating influence of the returning sun. The vegetable juices begin to flow with accellerated velocity, and in the animal world the blood circulates with increasing energy, and every thing is now life and activity; & all but man are ready to obey this universal influence.—He is the only being which can be contented to lie dead, while every thing around him is springing to life. But they, who are the willing victims of their own poverty, must share the consequences of their folly, and they hardly deserve the sympathy or commiseration of those around them. He who is alive to his duty, is happy in the discharge of duty, and he who keeps pace with his business, is led and not driven by it, and he who is slothful in his business, or careless in the manner in which he prepares his grounds and commits the seeds to them, is not only brother to a waster but a down right fool. He sows to the wind, and he will reap the whirlwind.

The earth revived puts on her green,
The Graces in the meads are seen;
And beauty with her wanton smiles,
The unsuspicious heart beguiles.

"The farmer's life displays in every part
A moral lesson to the sensual heart.
Though in the lap of plenty, thoughtful still,
He looks beyond the present good or ill;
Nor estimates alone one blessing's worth,
From changeful seasons, or capricious earth;
But views the future with the present hours,
And looks for failures as he looks for showers."

The Goddess Fashion has erected her shrine upon earth, and at this shrine her blind and deluded votaries bow down with a homage as base and idolatrous, as that with which the superstitious Hindo prostrates himself before the car of Juggernaut. And among the worshippers of this fickle goddess may be ranked the great majority of mankind. Opinion rules the multitude. Where is the individual, who does not acknowledge its influence? Where is the individual who does not covet the good opinion of his neighbors? But this to a certain extent, is all well enough. When, however, we exceed the bounds of moderation and rob ourselves and families of the comforts of life, or run ourselves into debt for the sake of making a show—when we become more anxious to please our fellow beings, than to please our Maker,—in fine, when we feel more afraid of violating the etiquette of the fashionable world—than in violating the express commands of the Almighty, then it is time to take heed how ye do homage at the shrine of Fashion. Pause and reflect, and obey the dictates of a sober judgment, when you go to the store, my fair friend, for a new bonnet, a new gown &c. &c. Many small leaks will soon exhaust a large reservoir. And, farmers, show that the noxious weeds of vice and folly are not rooted in your hearts, by the care which you take to exterminate the baneful weeds from your fields and gardens.

Artificial wants are more numerous and lead to more expense than natural wants.

From pasture, wood, from hill and dale,
The vernal songs my ears assail,
And tell me, by the rapturous sound,
That all is mirth and joy around.

Farmer's Calendar.

"Hark! where now the sweeping scythe now rips along,
Each sturdy mower emulous and strong;
Whose writhing form meridian heat defies,
Bends o'er his work and every sinew tries;
Prostrates the waving treasure at his feet,
But spares the rising clover short and sweet;
Mean while the farmer quits his elbow chair,
Flies to the field the general toil to share."

After line upon line, and precept upon precept, we still hear the cry of hard times, and this cry will never cease till the work of reformation commences. The excressences of fashion must be lopped off—expenses must be curtailed—old coats must be worn out—gown patterns must be lessened—the dimensions of bonnets must be diminished—hats must be let down one story—and good old homespun "check and stripe"—lambs wool and worsted must be in vogue. And the ladies, dear creatures, must set the example—Their harps and pianos must be exchanged for looms and spinning wheels, and they must shine out on the sabbath in all the glory of substantial homespun. They must not rustle in silk, when calico will do as well, and as the saying is, comes much cheaper. Besides, as retrenchment is the word, let out your plaits and tacks, and lessen your patterns, diminishing at the same time the balloons which buoy up your shoulders, and make you look like a non descript magnified insect. And further as an antidote against hard times, let all become members of temperance societies—and let cheap living societies be established—let your pound cake be made of indian meal and molasses, and to restore the gluttenous & gouty to their activity, let them be confined to bean porridge, bone soup and hominy. Among other societies, I would recommend an anti-cake society, and anti-sweetmeat society, the members of which should bind themselves to set only two kinds of cake upon the table instead of half a dozen, and to offer no more than two kinds of tarts, jells or preserves.

High gleaming now the sun displays
His unveiled face, and pours a blaze
Of light and heat on every hand,
While nature sinks, or drooping stands.

Farmer's Calendar.

"Here midst the boldest triumphs of her worth,
Nature herself invites the reapers forth;
Dares the keen sickle from its twelve month's rest,
And gives that ardour which in every breast
From infancy to age alike appears,
When the bright sheaf its plumy top up-rears."

Farmers, "consider your calling the most elevated and the most important; but never be above it, nor be afraid of the frock and apron. Put off no business to the morrow, which can and ought to be done to day. Cultivate no more ground than you can till to advantage. Never hire a man to do a piece of work which you can do yourself. Every day has its appropriate duties, and they can all be easily performed, if they are taken up in their proper order. Let your stock be of the best breeds, and keep no more of it than you can keep in good order. Never run in debt without a reasonable probability that you shall be able to pay precisely at the time agreed on. Remember that industry and economy are the handmaids to fortune—the two great pillars of the farmer's prosperity. Never buy an article at auction because it goes cheap, unless you really need it. Instead of spending a rainy day at the grog shop as many do to their ruin, repair whatever wants mending, or post your books. Never trust your money in the hands of that man, who puts his own to hazard. Whenever interest or a debt becomes due, pay it at the time, whether your creditor wants it or not. Remember that punctuality is not only the life of business, but a key to your neighbors chest. By following these directions—by constant temperance in your meats and drinks—by a habitual control over your passions—by moderation in exercise, and by an unaffected honesty in all your dealings, you will be enabled to avoid the fees of the lawyer and the sheriff—you will gain a good report among your acquaintances—will secure serenity of mind—probably add to your present existence, ten years of active life.

And now perchance up western skies
The sad and dismal tempests rise,
And lightnings flash and thunders roar,
And hailstones fly and waters pour.

Farmer's Calendar.

"Beyond bleak winter's rage, beyond the spring,
That rolling earth's unvarying course will bring,
Who till the ground, looks on with mental eye,
And sees next summer's sheaves and cloudless sky;
And even now, while nature's beauty dies,
Deposits seeds and bids new harvests rise.
Seed well prepared and warmed with glowing lime
'Gainst earth-bed grubs, and cold and lapse of time."

Be calm, friend, and let not slight disappointments move thee or discompose thy passions. Thou desirest health—Remember, that a calm, contented cheerful disposition is the only legitimate source of that blessing. Looking at the favourable side of things, as father Paul has it, causes our little to prosper, and independent of the other advantages afforded by equanimity of temper, we are assured by lord Byron, that a cheerful tone of mind is a powerful antidote against the fashionable malady yclept dispepsia, and all must have read the saying of the wise king, 'that a merry heart does good like a medicine, but a broken spirit drieth the bones.' But by a cheerful or merry heart, I do not mean that thoughtless levity which vents itself in vacant noise and laughter. It should be of a calm and thoughtful kind, springing rather from the contemplations of the goodness of Providence, than from the action of any unnatural stimuli. A moments consideration of the unmerited bounties which we are daily enjoying at the hands of our Maker, is enough to draw out the heart in grateful emotions towards the great source of all perfection and happiness, and this feeling of gratitude is the true source of that serene calmness, which is the foundation of human felicity, and the only surety for health and long life.

Be not negligent in securing the productions of the ground—those fruits, with which a bountiful providence has been pleased to reward the labours of thy hands. There is not a particle of gratitude in that heart which is slothful in the day of harvest,

But Sol abates his feverish glow,
And cooler now the breezes blow;
And now the manhood of the year
Is present—age anon is here.

Farmer's Calendar.

" Again the year's decline 'midst storms and floods,
The thundering chase, the yellow fading woods,
Invite my song ; that fain would boldly tell
Of upland coverts and the echoing dell,
By turns resounding loud at eve and morn,
The swineherd's halloo, and the huntsman's horn."

See that your corn and potatoes are secured—There is nothing like taking care of things, and it is really mortifying to see what immense losses are occasioned by little negligencies. Mr. Lay gives a fine example in illustration, " Being in the country, says he, I saw an example of those losses which a family is exposed to, through negligence. For the want of a latch of small value, the gate of a barn yard was left open ; every one who went through drew it to after, but having no means to fasten it, it remained flapping ; the poultry escaped and were lost. One day a fine pig got out and run into the woods, and immediately all the world was after it—the gardner, the cook, the dairy maid, and all ran to recover the swine. The gardner got sight of him first, and jumping over a ditch to stop him, sprained his ancle and was confined a fortnight to the house. The cook on her return, found all the linen she had left by the fire to dry burned, and the dairy maid having ran off before she tied up the cows, one of them broke the leg of a colt in the stable. The gardner's lost time was worth 20 dollars, valueing his pains at nothing ; the linen burned and colt spoiled were worth as much more. Here is a loss of 40 dollars, and much pain, vexation and inconvenience for the want of a latch, which would cost only three or four cents, and this loss through carelessness and neglect." Similar illustrations are of frequent occurrence. Have a care then, lest your own affairs present one, and you have to lament when too late, that you did not drive a nail, put up a bar, mend a pane of glass, &c. in season.

And while the heaps of yellow corn
And ripening fruits the fields adorn,
A grateful heart to Him will rise,
Who pours these blessings from the skies.

Farmer's Calendar.

" Shorn of their flowers that shed the untreasured seed,
The withering pasture and the fading mead,
Less tempting grown, diminish more and more,
The dairy's pride ; sweet Summer's flowing store
New cares succeed, and gentle duties press
Our homes become a school of tenderness."

This month has often been stigmatised as the saddest of the twelve sisters. It is represented as the season of frost and gloom of hypo, and suicide. It is true that November does not possess the gaiety and beauty of May, nor the softness and voluptuous charms of June—but, there is an honest & familiar frankness in her coming, which render her, uncouth and rude as her mien may be, a very agreeable visitant. She is like the buxom fair one of the by-gone times of our grandmothers—with tresses unadorned and with a homely garb,—but with a kindly spirit and a warm and generous heart.

Summer has departed with its gaiety and its sunny smiles, but has left us in return, our barns and our grainaries filled to overflowing with the good things of this life, and we are now called upon by the season of the year, by the example of our Puritan ancestors, and by every other motive which can actuate a virtuous and generous soul, to lift our hearts in gratitude to Him who crowneth the year with his loving kindness, who rewardeth the confidence and the toils of the husbandman, and who scattereth his blessings with a liberal hand.

Ten thousand thousand precious gifts
Flow from his bounteous hand,
And these as months and days move on,
Our daily thanks demand,
But when the harvest home has come
And all its fruits are safe in store,
In union let our thanks ascend,
In union worship and adore.

And as the passing months depart,
They teach a lesson to the heart;
Bid it regard the changing year,
An emblem of its journey here.

Farmer's Calendar.

"Ah how soon
The shades of twilight follow hazy noon,
But welcome, cold; welcome, ye snowy nights!
Heaven midst your rage shall mingle pure delights!
The confidence of hope the soul sustains,
While devastation sweeps along the plains;
Nor shall the child of poverty despair,
But bless the Power that reeks the changing year."

But the year is fast drawing to a close, and the many things which I have to say, must be said in few words. And first mind your own business and let other folks alone—speak but little and let not that little be respecting yourself, nor to the slander of your neighbors—listen when spoken to, and be polite to all—tell no lies, not even those called white lies—avoid wrangling, medling and tittle tattle—trust not implicitly to any—beware of proffered friendship—set him down as a liar who swears to the truth of every thing he says—judge others by yourself—never be slothful, never be in a hurry—never be slovenly in your dress, never be a fop—avoid all kinds of vanity—neglect not an old acquaintance—be not witty at another's expense—pass no joke with a sting, say not all you think, nor tell all you know, use neither vulgar nor profane language, in fine, practice all the virtues—avoid all the vices—keep a memorandum book—enter on it all your transactions—reckon and settle with all those with whom you have accounts—pay up all your bills and collect all your dues—and what is of equal importance, reckon with yourself—balance debt and credit—loss and gain, and see how you stand with the world—and not only with this world, but in relation to the world to come—all these things do and practice and thy life shall glide on serenely, and thou wilt be prepared to enter upon another year, or upon another life, as Providence may order—Farewell.

And as we bid the year adieu,
Let us our journey past review,
And let our errors past suffice
To make us for the future wise.

JUDICIARY OF THE UNITED STATES.

The judicial power in the United States is vested in one Supreme Court, and in such inferiour courts as Congress from time to time may establish. The present judicial establishment of the United States consists of a Supreme Court, of 28 District Courts, and seven Circuit Courts, which are thus organized; the Supreme Court is composed of one Chief Justice and six Associate Justices, who hold a court in the city of Washington annually; besides which, each of these Justices attends in a certain circuit, comprising two or more districts, appropriated to each, and together with the Judge of the District, compose a circuit court, which is holden in each district in the circuit. The district courts are held, respectively, by the district Judge alone. Appeals are allowed from the district to the Circuit Courts, and from the Circuit to the Supreme Court; and, in some cases, where the inconvenience of attending the court by a justice of the Supreme Court is very great, the District Courts are invested with Circuit Court powers.

MILITIA OF VERMONT.

The Militia of the state consists of all the able bodied males, with a few exceptions made by law, between the age of 18 and 45 years. Each soldier is required to keep himself constantly provided with such arms and equipments, as are necessary for actual service, and, by so doing, his poll is exempted from taxation. The whole militia is, at present, divided into four divisions, 10 brigades and 35 regiments, with from eight to 12 companies in each. Belonging to most of the regiments is also one company of cavalry, one of artillery and one of light infantry, and in many cases more than one of each. The Governor is captain general and commander in chief, and with the advice of the council is to arrange the whole militia into divisions, brigades, &c, and may, from time to time, make such alterations as he shall see fit. Each division is commanded by a major general, with a division inspector, a division quarter master, and two aids; each brigade by a brigadier general, with a brigade inspector, brigade quarter master, and one aid; each regiment by a colonel, lieutenant colonel and major, with the customary staff: and each company by a captain, lieutenant and ensign, with the customary non-commissioned officers. The major generals and brigadier generals are appointed by the legislature. The field officers are chosen by the commissioned officers of their respective regiments and the several companies elect their own officers. The whole militia of the state amounts to about 25,000.

Geography & History

OF

VERMONT:

Stereotype edition, revised and corrected, with an improved Map of the State and thirteen engravings.

By S. R. HALL, A. M. author of Lectures on School Keeping.

J. S. WALTON

HAS in press, and will publish in a few days, the third edition of the above valuable school book. This edition will contain a colored map of the state, corrected agreeably to the late alterations, bound with the book—a view of the principal mountains in the state, with the height of each engraven on the plate—a view of the Falls on Onion river, in Marshfield—a view of the "Siamese" or Twin Trees, in Norwich—a specimen of some of the principal wild and domestic animals—a view of McDonough's victory on Lake Champlain—the capture of Bridgeman's fort—a representation of the attack on Mrs. Stone by the Indians—of the hardships of the first settlers—a view of Indians hunting and sailing in a bark canoe—with several other cuts.

RECOMMENDATIONS.

The Journal of Education, one of the most deservedly celebrated literary publications of this work says:

"This is one of the most judicious and practical books, for a primary school, we have yet seen. The geographical details are well selected; and the chapter on natural history will furnish much food for thought, and will aid the early formation of good mental habits. The civil history is sufficiently copious for the purposes of such a volume, and the account of the hardships of the early settlers is highly instructive and entertaining. Books such as this contain the true elements of enlightened patriotism, and possess a much higher value than is apparent at first sight."

Zadock Thompson, A. M. instructor of a popular school in Burlington, says:

"I am very much pleased with the "Geography and History of Vermont," by the Rev. S. R. Hall, which you lately put into my hands. It is a work which, I believe, might be profitably introduced into all the primary schools in this state."

This work is also highly recommended by the Rev. Mr. McKeen, Bradford; by Mr. Cyrus Lancaster, Preceptor of Bradford Academy, and by many instructors of common schools.

☞ Booksellers and others will be supplied on liberal terms.

Dec. 1831.
